The Road To OKC: Stanford Opens
Postseason Play On Home TurfThe 2009 Cardinal has nabbed the No. 8 overall seed in the tournament and will host Cal Poly, Nevada and Portland State in an NCAA Regional this weekend.UP NEXT

After posting 44 regular-season wins, dominating its non-conference schedule and surviving a run through one of the nation's toughest conferences with a program-best 13-8 record, the No. 5/5 Stanford softball team (44-9) now must put its accomplishments in a back pocket and begin the most exciting part of the season - the NCAA Championship. The eighth-seeded Cardinal has been selected to host an NCAA Regional for the fourth time since 2001 and will welcome Portland State, Cal Poly and Nevada to The Farm to kick off the tournament. Stanford will open regional play against Portland State on Friday at 6 p.m. (PT). No. 22/22 Cal Poly and Nevada will square off in Friday's first game at 3 p.m.

LAST TIME OUT

After posting one of the best weekends in school history against the Arizona schools in its final home weekend, the Cardinal suffered a series of setbacks on its most grueling road trip of the year last week. The team, which entered the weekend having scored in 48 consecutive games dating back to opening day, was shut out three times against No. 4/5 Washington and No. 2/3 UCLA. Senior Maddy Coon was Stanford's best bet at the plate in the series, hitting .333 on the weekend.

POSTSEASON CHATTER

The Cardinal will be participating in the NCAA Tournament for the 12th consecutive year, dating back to 1998 when the team made its first postseason appearance in John Rittman's second year as head coach. The Cardinal has won five regional titles, and made appearances in the Women's College World Series in 2001 and 2004. The Cardinal has reached a Super Regional three of the last four years, and holds a 28-26 (.519) all-time record in postseason play.

HOME COOKIN'

Stanford will be opening the postseason at home for the fourth time since 2001 and, should the team advance, will likely be a Super Regional host as well. The Cardinal is 27-1 at home this year, has six wins over ranked opponents there, 10 wins over the tournament field at home and has outscored its visitors 117-25. Combined, Stanford pitchers Ashley Chinn (0.88 home ERA/7.93 road ERA) and Missy Penna (0.75 home ERA/3.45 road ERA) allow their opponents more than three runs less per game at home than on the road. Historically, Stanford has succeeded when playing postseason games at home as well, owning a 10-6 record in tournament games played at home. Stanford has only held home field advantage all the way through to the World Series twice before - in 2001 and 2004 when the program made its only two trips to Oklahoma City.

STANFORD VS. THE FIELD

The Cardinal is 15-9 against the 2009 tournament field with a 10-1 mark against those tournament teams at home. In addition to the five fellow Pac-10 teams that qualified, Stanford met Notre Dame, Oklahoma State, Cal State Fullerton, Cal Poly, Long Beach State and San Diego State earlier this year.

PAC-10 WRAP-UP

At 13-8, Stanford matched its best conference record since the Pac-10 went to a 21-game schedule in 2000 and posted a winning record in conference play for the sixth time in school history. UCLA claimed the conference crown, while Washington took second place and Arizona edged the Cardinal for third. The Cardinal won its only Pac-10 title in 2005, tying for the conference crown with a 13-8 record. Six Pac-10 teams were awarded bids to this year's NCAA Tournament, with five of the six receiving one of the 16 seeds.

40 WINS!

With Stanford's win over Oregon State on April 25, the team secured its 11th 40-win season in 13 years under head coach John Rittman. Rittman and the Cardinal have hit the milestone 11 times in the last 12 years. Stanford was the first team in the Pac-10 to get its 40th win this year. Notably, the Cardinal hit No. 40 before the month of May for just the third time in school history. Last year's squad and the 2001 WCWS team that won a school-record 54 games were the only other Stanford teams to do so.

MISSY FOR PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Last week, senior pitcher Missy Penna was named one of 10 finalists for USA Softball's National Player of the Year award. She was the first player in Stanford history to make the top-10 list. The list will be narrowed to three finalists on May 20 and the winner will be announced prior to the start of the Women's College World Series. Junior outfielder Alissa Haber and freshman shortstop Ashley Hansen joined Penna on the 25-player watch list in April, with Hansen the only rookie in the nation to make the list.

SCALING THE POLLS

After losing three games last week, Stanford fell to No. 5 in both major collegiate softball polls. Stanford's season-high No. 2 rank, which the team held as recently as last week, matched the highest in school history. Prior to this season, Stanford had only accomplished that feat twice (both in 2002). The squad was second in both polls for three consecutive weeks earlier this year, holding a No. 2 rank after the start of Pac-10 play for the first time in school history. The Cardinal, which has appeared in every regular-season NFCA poll for more than a decade, has now been in the NFCA top five for 13 straight weeks, the longest streak in program history. Six of the eight Pac-10 schools appear in both polls, with as many as five appearing in the top 10 and three appearing in the top five.

THE BIG STREAK

With Stanford's loss to UCLA on March 27, one of the longest winning streaks in NCAA history, and the longest by the Cardinal program, came to an end. Going into its Pac-10 opener, Stanford had won 28 straight games, tying for the 17th-longest winning streak of all-time. It was the longest single-season run by a Pac-10 team since Arizona (31 games) and Cal (32 games) posted similar streaks early in 2001. Prior to this year, Stanford's longest win streak was 16 games (2002). The team swept five tournaments and went 47 days, 188 innings and 28 games without suffering a loss.

EARLY BIRDS

Stanford has scored first in 40 times this year, and only let one of those 40 leads slip away. Of the 13 times that opponents have gotten on the board first, Stanford has come back to win five times. In the first inning, Stanford has scored more times than any other inning (57) and been most likely to keep opponents off the board. In 53 games, Stanford has held opponents to just 10 runs in the opening frame.

ROOKIE WATCH

Stanford freshman Ashley Hansen, who was the only high school player invited to USA Softball's Olympic Selection Camp in 2007, is having the best rookie season since Stanford's most famous Olympian, Jessica Mendoza, stepped on The Farm exactly a decade ago. Mendoza went on to become a four-time first-team All-American and key player on the USA Team that won a gold medal in Athens in 2004 and a silver medal in Beijing last summer. Here's a look at how Hansen's 2009 season is lining up with Mendoza's 1999 season, when she earned the program's only Pac-10 Freshman of the Year award:

- Mendoza has been the only Stanford rookie to hit over .400 (.415). Hansen (.397) is flirting with a .400 year as well.
- Mendoza had 81 hits in 62 games in 1999 (1.31 per game). Hansen has 75 hits in 53 games already (1.42 per game).
- Mendoza had 13 doubles, two triples, nine home runs and slugged .641 during her rookie season. Hansen already has 19 doubles, five triples and four home runs and is slugging .614.
- Mendoza struck out just 22 times in 195 at bats as a freshman (once every 8.9 AB's). Hansen has struck out just 12 times this year in 189 at bats (once every 15.8 AB's).
- Mendoza earned Stanford's first national player of the week honor as a freshman on March 8, 1999, after just four weeks of collegiate play. Hansen followed in her footsteps on Feb. 17, 2009, becoming the second Stanford freshman to earn the award (after just her second weekend of collegiate play).
- Mendoza was one of 18 first-team All-Americans as a freshman in 1999. On April 1, Hansen was the only freshman among the 25 players named to USA Softball's 2009 Player of the Year Watch List.

THE MISSY PENNA FILE

- LATELY: Penna threw two games last weekend on the Washington/UCLA road trip. Her best performance came Friday, when she threw a four-hitter and allowed just one unearned run in six innings of work.
- POTW DOMINATION: Penna has won five Pac-10 Pitcher of the Week awards this year and boasts nine for her career. She won for sweeping the Oregon schools in late April and, despite not winning the Pac-10 award for her efforts against the Arizona schools two weeks ago, she claimed both National Player of the Week honors. She has now swept the NFCA and USA Softball National Player of the Week awards twice this season, having also done so after beating then-No. 2 Washington in late March. She is the first player in school history to win both organizations' honors in the same week as well as the first player in school history to earn a national weekly honor twice in the same year.
- IN THE NATION: Penna ranks among the top 10 pitchers in the country in three major pitching categories. She ranks fourth in the nation with 17 shutouts, fourth with 31 wins and is seventh with 323 strikeouts.
- IN THE PAC-10: Penna ranks second in the league behind Washington's Danielle Lawrie in wins (31), strikeouts (323) and innings pitched (256.1). She ranks third in the conference behind Lawrie and UCLA's Megan Langenfeld with a 1.45 ERA and .175 opposing average.
- STRIKEOUT RECORD, CHECK: Penna broke her fourth Stanford career pitching record against Arizona State on April 18, striking out her 1,155th career batter to break Dana Sorensen's strikeout record. Penna now has 1,226 career strikeouts and is in a back-and-forth with Washington's Danielle Lawrie for sixth/seventh place in the Pac-10 record books and 20th/21st in the NCAA record books (Lawrie currently has 1,242). Among the greats Penna has passed on the strikeout list along the way? Two-time Olympian Jennie Finch (1,028).
- SHUTOUT RECORD, CHECK: Penna shut out Notre Dame on Feb. 20, nabbing the 36th shutout of her career. With the win, Penna set a new school record, topping the previous top mark set by Becky Blevins a decade ago (35, 1996-99). Since then, Penna has continued to dominate. Her shutout against Arizona State on May 1 built her ongoing school shutout record to 49.
- WIN RECORD, CHECK: With her win over Oregon State on April 3, Penna recorded her 106th career victory and passed three-time All-American Dana Sorensen as the winningest pitcher in Stanford history. With 115 career wins to date, she is the seventh-winningest pitcher in Pac-10 history and tied as the 20th winningest of all-time.

- INNINGS PITCHED RECORD, CHECK: With her win over Washington on March 29, Penna broke Sorensen's school record for innings pitched. Penna has now thrown 1048.1 innings in her four years on The Farm. That total ranks fourth in Pac-10 history, 30 innings short of third-place Katie Burkhart (Arizona State '08). On April 24, she became the first pitcher at Stanford and the sixth in conference history to throw 1,000 innings.

- SINGLE-SEASON RECORDS: Penna shattered her own single-season shutout record on April 26 against Oregon State, and built her new school record up to 17 on May 1 against Arizona State. Penna's 31 wins rank third on the Stanford single-season chart and her 323 K's rank fourth.

- SINGLE-GAME STRIKEOUT RECORD: On March 23, Penna shattered the school's single-game strikeout record with 19 K's in a 10-inning win over Cal Poly. The performance bested the school record she set last May - 17 K's at Arizona State.

- 1,000 AND COUNTING: On March 1, Penna posted her 1,000th career strikeout and joined 10 of the most elite pitchers in Pac-10 history. Penna was the first active player in the country to reach the notable landmark and the 11th player in Pac-10 history to do so. Dana Sorensen is the only other Stanford player to hit 1,000, with 1,154 K's in her impressive career between 2000 and 2004.

- 1,200 IN THE BOOKS: Prior to a few weeks ago, only 23 players in NCAA history had ever reached 1,200 career K's. Penna joined that group with 11 strikeouts against Arizona State on May 1, fanning the final batter of the game to become the first active player in the country to reach 1,200.

THE .300 CLUB

Only five Stanford players have ever finished their careers with a batting average over .300, but senior Maddy Coon is attempting to make it six. Coon currently boasts a .301 career average and could join Jessica Mendoza '02, Sarah Beeson '02, Jackie Rinehart '07, Lauren Lappin '06 and Catalina Morris '06 in the .300 club when her career ends.

THE .400 CLUB

Two-time Olympian Jessica Mendoza is the only Stanford player who has ever hit .400 or better in a season, doing so three times during her career. Junior Alissa Haber (.439) is on track to match her feat this year. Freshman Ashley Hansen (.397) is flirting with the idea of a .400 season as well.

JUNIOR SLUGGERS

Stanford's lineup is anchored by the power-hitting class of 2010. The three Cardinal juniors - Alissa Haber, Rosey Neill and Shannon Koplitz - are the team's three home run leaders, having accounted for 25 of the team's 39 long balls this year (64 percent). They are slugging nearly .600 as a class (.597), more than 200 points higher than the rest of the team combined, and have driven in 96 runs. Career-wise, Haber, Neill and Koplitz are three of the top 11 home run hitters in school history and are all carrying career slugging percentages which would rank among the school's all-time top 10.

HARD TO HANDLE

Two-time All-American Alissa Haber is one of the toughest outs in the nation, as her batting average (.439) stands third in the Pac-10 and 14th nationally. Her current season average is second only to the figure that Jessica Mendoza posted when she became Stanford's only Pac-10 Player of the Year in 2000 (.475).

STREAK TALK

Alissa Haber posted a career-long 18-game hitting streak between Feb. 7 and March 6, racking up 33 hits in the month-long span ... Ashley Hansen has had the team's only other double-digit streak at 10 games (Feb. 7-21) ... Hansen has also posted two separate seven-game multi-hit streaks ... Hansen and Haber each hit in 15 of the 21 Pac-10 games, and Hansen had nine multi-hit games in conference play.

CRACKING THE TOP-10

Alissa Haber cracked the school's all-time top-10 in hits in March, became the program's ninth player to get her 200th career hit on April 14 and now has 221 for her career. Just a junior, she has already etched her name on seven of Stanford's career top-10 charts (hits, walks, doubles, triples, home runs, runs scored and stolen bases).

FAB FROSH

Stanford's freshmen have all lived up to their billing so far. Five freshmen have made at least one start, four have become regular members of the lineup and two (Ashley Hansen and Sarah Hassman) have gotten the starting nod in all 53 games. Hansen, who was the only high school player selected to attend USA Softball's Olympic Selection Camp in 2007, has headlined the rookie crew. In her first collegiate season, she already ranks among the top-10 offensive players in the conference with a .397 batting average, 75 hits, 19 doubles and 48 RBI. She is also the conference's leader in triples (5), and just one short of Stanford's single-season record.

SCORE, SCORE, SCORE SOME MORE

After being shut out by Oklahoma State on the first day of the season, Stanford scored in 48 consecutive games before suffering a drought last weekend. The Cardinal has scored five or more runs 26 times this year, averages 5.11 runs per game and has accumulated more than double the runs of its opponents (271-102). The team is currently carrying one of the top three batting averages in program history (.291).

BOTTOM OF THE ORDER STEPPING UP

The bottom third of Stanford's batting order stepped up over the last few weeks of conference play, with freshmen Jenna Becerra, Sarah Hassman and Maya Burns providing key hits. Burns and Becerra teamed up for back-to-back hits to score the game-winning run in the eighth inning at Arizona State on April 18, while Hassman had four key hits in the Oregon series. Becerra and Hassman singled and scored in the Cardinal's win over Arizona State on May 1 and Becerra came up with a hit for the tying RBI in a late comeback against Arizona the next day. In the series-clinching win over Arizona, Burns was 3-for-3 and scored the game-winning run.

DOUBLE DUTY

Junior Alissa Haber hit her 50th career double two weeks ago, joining Jessica Mendoza and Sarah Beeson as the only Stanford players to hit 50 or more in their careers. As a matter of fact, only nine Stanford players, including Haber and teammate Maddy Coon, have ever hit 40 or more. Haber, who now has 52 and needs just one more double to join the Pac-10's career top-10, ranks third nationally in doubles per game (0.40). She has hit a career-best 21 doubles this year, joining Beeson, Mendoza and Allister as the only Stanford players to hit 20 or more in a season. She is two short of Mendoza's school single-season record. Not to be overlooked, freshman Ashley Hansen has 19 doubles this year, the most of any freshman in school history. That total is sixth in the Stanford season record books and ranks 10th nationally.

TRIPLE TIME

The Cardinal has been racking up tons of triples this season and set a new school record on April 14 with 15 on the year. The 2009 team, which is currently carrying one of the best batting averages (.291) in school history, has topped the previous-best 14-triple efforts of the 2005 and 2006 teams. Ashley Hansen leads the way with five triples this year, and is just one short of Stanford's single-season record.

13 STRAIGHT WINNING SEASONS

Head Coach John Rittman has already ensured that his team will record its 13th straight winning season this year. With a 44-9 record and one of the top five winning percentages in the country (.830), Stanford has been guaranteed to finish over .500 since late March. Rittman took over the program in 1997 and led it to its first winning season ever that year. He has now kept the team over .500 in each of his 13 seasons.

NO-HITTER CHATTER

Sophomore pitcher Ashley Chinn threw her third career no-hitter against San Jose State on April 22. She threw two no-hitters, including the school's seventh perfect game, as a rookie last season and is now tied for third place on the school's career no-hitter chart. Senior pitcher Missy Penna threw her first no-hitter of the year against Kansas on Feb. 7. The no-hitter was the fifth of her career, tying Dana Sorensen's school record. Penna has now thrown five of the school's 19 all-time no-hitters.

FLOOD OF FREE PASSES

Just two weeks into her senior year, infielder Maddy Coon shattered the school's career walk record, passing Sarah Beeson's former mark of 115. Coon now holds every walk record in the Stanford books, with 139 career walks, 47 single-season walks (2008) and four single-game walks (2/29/08). Her 139 walks rank among the 10 best career totals in Pac-10 history as well (9th). Coon and junior Rosey Neill lead the team in walks this year with 34 apiece.

COON ON THE CLIMB

Maddy Coon has also established herself on a number of the school's other top-10 lists. Currently, Coon ranks fifth in career doubles (46), seventh in home runs (27), sixth in runs (139) and sixth in RBI (136). Also with 178 hits to her name, Coon is just the second player in school history to register triple digits in four different offensive categories (Sarah Beeson '02 is the other).

CAREER CYCLE

Alissa Haber is one of the most versatile hitters in school history. Recently, Haber joined two of the best hitters in school history - Jessica Mendoza '02 and Catalina Morris '06 - as the only players to be among the school's 10 career leaders in hits, doubles, triples and home runs.

IN THE CLUTCH

Juniors Alissa Haber and Shannon Koplitz have proved to work the best under pressure for the Cardinal. Haber is Stanford's best hitter with runners on base (.478) and runners in scoring position (.452). Koplitz is the team's best bet with two outs (.333), is 4-for-5 with bases loaded and leads the team with 17 two-out RBI. Another clutch hitter? Ashley Hansen is 6-for-13 with bases loaded, and has driven in a run 19 of the 27 times she has come up with a runner on third and less than two outs (.704).

HOMER QUEEN

Fresh off matching a school record and ranking 10th nationally with 19 home runs in 2008, junior catcher Rosey Neill is again Stanford's best home run bet this year with nine on the season. Just past the midpoint of her career, Neill has 35 home runs, joining four of Stanford's greatest sluggers - Jessica Mendoza '02, Jessica Allister '04, Catalina Morris '06 and Michelle Smith '08 - as the only players to have hit 30 or more career homers. Neill is currently in third place on Stanford's career home run chart behind Mendoza and Smith.

GOING THE EXTRA MILE

The Stanford team has already combined for 84 doubles, 15 triples and 39 home runs this season. With a total of 138 extra-base hits, the Cardinal is averaging nearly three per game! How does that stack up? Entering the postseason, Stanford has already broken the school triple record, hit more doubles than all but three other teams and is one short of becoming the fifth team in school history to hit 40 homers. Stanford has recorded at least one extra-base hit in 46 out of its 53 contests so far.

CHASING DOWN THE RECORDS

As juniors, Rosey Neill and Alissa Haber have their eyes on some of the school records set by the best player in Stanford history, two-time Olympian Jessica Mendoza. Neill entered her junior year with 26 home runs (and now has 35). By comparison, Mendoza hit 36 of her 50 bombs by the end of her junior season. Nearing the end of her third season, Haber has 52 doubles to her name. Mendoza had 53 of her school-record 70 doubles by the end of her junior year.

HABER AMONG THE ELITE

All-American outfielder Alissa Haber currently owns a .392 career batting average, a clip which stands only behind that of two-time Olympian Jessica Mendoza in the Cardinal record books. After leading Stanford in nearly every offensive category the last two years, Haber has twice earned All-America accolades. She is just the third player in school history to enter her junior year as a two-time All-American, matching the accomplishments of eventual four-time All-American Mendoza and eventual three-time All-American Dana Sorensen. Three players on the Cardinal squad (Haber, Maddy Coon and Ashley Hansen) are currently carrying career batting averages that would rank in the school's top-10.

1,000 AND COUNTING

Junior catcher Rosey Neill recorded her 1,000th career putout on Feb. 21, joining former greats Sarah Beeson '02, Kellie Wiginton '00 and Jessica Allister '04 as the only Cardinal players to reach the milestone. Battery counterpart Missy Penna reached the 1,000-K mark on March 1.

THE LONG...

Stanford has played four extra-inning games this year, against Cal Poly on March 23, against Washington on March 28, against Arizona State on April 18 and against Oregon on April 24. Stanford is 4-0 in those games, outscoring opponents 5-0 in extra frames. Stanford is 5-0 when tied entering the final inning of play.

...AND SHORT OF IT

Stanford has won six games by run-rule this year, with its most recent coming against Penn State on March 6.

SUPER SENIOR

Senior pitcher Missy Penna was among 10 collegiate softball players chosen as finalists for the 2009 Lowe's Senior CLASS Award. Each year, the award is presented to student-athletes who excel not only on the playing field but also in the classroom and in their community.

TEAM USA PICKS

Freshman shortstop Ashley Hansen and sophomore outfielder Alissa Haber are among the 27 initial athletes invited to attend the 2009 USA Softball Women's National Team Selection Camp in Chula Vista, Calif., June 8-12. The list includes a number of current and former college standouts, as well as eight 2008 Olympians. Stanford alum Lauren Lappin '06, who won a silver medal with Team USA at the Beijing Olympics last summer, will also be attending the camp. Hansen, just 18 and a college freshman, is the youngest player on the invitee list.

ABOUT PORTLAND STATE

Series Record: Stanford leads Portland State 6-1 all-time.

Last Meeting: PSU bested Stanford, 3-0, at the Stanford Invitational II on March 25, 2007. The Vikings scored one in the fourth inning and two more in the top of the seventh and collected nine hits to take a game from the Cardinal for the first time ever.

Last Stanford Victory: On March 6, 2004 then-sophomore Laura Severson pitched a complete game shutout as Stanford defeated Portland State, 4-0, at the Worth Invitational in Fullerton.

Current Streak: Portland State won the last time the two teams played.

Common Ground: The Vikings and Cardinal have both played McNeese State, Arizona State, Oklahoma State, Washington, Oregon, Santa Clara, Oregon State, Sacramento State and Saint Mary's this year. Stanford is 15-3 in games against those teams, while Portland State is 13-12.

Scouting Report: The Vikings (29-24) earned the Pacific Coast Softball Conference's automatic bid to the field of 64 by claiming their second conference title in four seasons. They have won six of their last seven games heading into the postseason and went 15-5 in PCSC play. Their biggest win came over then-No. 16 DePaul in mid-February, but they also boast a victory over NCAA participant Oklahoma State. Co-PCSC Player of the Year Jackie Heide leads the Vikings with a .369 batting average, 12 home runs and 41 RBI. Jana Rae Slayton, a PCSC First Team pick, is close behind with a .333 average and 14 extra-base hits. In the circle, the Vikings boast PCSC Pitcher of the Year Nichole Latham. The sophomore right hander boasts a 2.63 ERA, a 16-11 record and 142 K's.

ABOUT CAL POLY

Series Record: Stanford is 8-3 against the Mustangs all-time.

Last Meeting: On March 23, Missy Penna went 10 innings and shattered the school's single-game strikeout record with 19 K's against the Mustangs. The Cardinal eventually won the marathon, 2-1, on a hit by Maddy Coon. Stanford also posted a one-run win in February, coming from behind in the seventh to get the 3-2 edge.

Last Cal Poly Victory: The Mustangs last beat the Cardinal on March 2, 2007 in Fullerton, 6-2.

Current Streak: Stanford has won the last two in the series with Cal Poly.

Common Ground: Stanford and Cal Poly have both played Indiana, San Diego State, UCLA, Kansas, Oregon State, Sacramento State, Utah State, Cal, Santa Clara, Cal State Fullerton, UC Santa Barbara, Long Beach State, UC Davis, Pacific and UC Riverside. Stanford is 18-5 in those games, while Cal Poly is 27-5.

Scouting Report: The Mustangs (39-10) claimed their second Big West title in three seasons with an 18-3 conference record. They have gone 18-1 over the last 19 games of the season and lead the Big West in batting average (.304), slugging percentage (.414), on-base percentage (.387) and runs (234). Six 2008 all-conference honorees have led the team this year, headlined by 2008 All-West Region pick Melissa Pura. Pura (.379) and outfielder Jessica Rogers (.357) are two of the six Mustangs hitting over .300, while Krysten Cary (.273) paces the squad with 14 home runs. In the circle, Anna Cahn (1.71 ERA, 151 K's) has been the Cal Poly ace, owning a 27-5 record with two of those losses coming at the hands of the Cardinal. Cahn also is one of the most dominant players at the plate and leads the team with 40 RBI. The Mustangs' biggest wins came over Cal on March 22 and Georgia Tech on Feb. 21.

ABOUT NEVADA

Series Record: Stanford is 1-0 against the Wolfpack all-time.

Last Meeting: On Feb. 11, 2006, then-freshman Missy Penna struck out 13 batters in a 5-1 win over the Wolfpack to earn her second career win. Tricia Aggabao hit a two RBI triple to pull Stanford out from an early deficit and lead the team to victory.

Last Nevada Victory: The Wolfpack has never beaten the Cardinal.

Current Streak: Stanford won the only time the two teams have played.

Common Ground: Stanford and Nevada have both played Arizona, UC Santa Barbara, Sacramento State, Minnesota, Cal, Oregon State, Cal Poly, Pacific, Oregon, Santa Clara, UC Davis, Utah State and San Jose State. Stanford is 20-3 in those games, while Nevada is 14-6.

Scouting Report: The Wolfpack (39-17) finished as the WAC runner-up this season and received an at-large bid to the field. Sophomore catcher Noelle Micka leads the way offensively with a .370 batting average, but senior outfielder Brittany Puzey brings the power with 11 doubles, 12 home runs and 46 RBI. In the circle, the Wolfpack ace is Katie Holverson, a junior who was recently named the WAC Pitcher of the Year. Holverson owns a 1.68 ERA with 27 wins, 226 K's and five shutouts. Nevada's most notable win came over Northwestern on Feb. 6.

IT COULD HAPPEN THIS WEEKEND...

- TEAM, 1 HOME RUN - Stanford needs one more long ball to become the fifth team in school history to hit 40 in a single year.
- PENNA, 1 WIN - Missy Penna is one win away from becoming the 18th-winningest pitcher in NCAA history. Three wins would tie her as the 16th-winningest overall and the sixth-winningest in the Pac-10.
- PENNA, 1 SHUTOUT - Penna needs one shutout to become the first pitcher in school history to post 50 for her career.
- HABER, 1 HIT - Alissa Haber needs one more hit to reach 80 for the season. Only Jessica Mendoza and Jackie Rinehart have done that at Stanford.
- HABER, 2 STEALS - If Haber steals two more bases, she will become the only player other than Mendoza to take 20 bases in a single year.
- KOPLITZ, 1 RBI - Shannon Koplitz is one RBI short of a spot on the school's single-season RBI top-10 list.
- HANSEN, 2 RBI - Ashley Hansen is two RBI shy of 50 on the year and would be the seventh Stanford player to reach the milestone.

SOLID VETERANS

With just five upperclassmen, the Cardinal is, for the most part, a very young team. Yet, the squad is armed with some of the Pac-10's most talented veterans at key positions. All five upperclassmen - Missy Penna, Maddy Coon, Shannon Koplitz, Alissa Haber and Rosey Neill - have been starters since the day they arrived on The Farm. The group has also been well decorated, accumulating 10 All-Pac-10 awards, six all-region honors and three All-America nods. Before the 2009 season even began, the fivesome has already combined to score 329 Cardinal runs, notch 531 hits and belt 73 home runs.

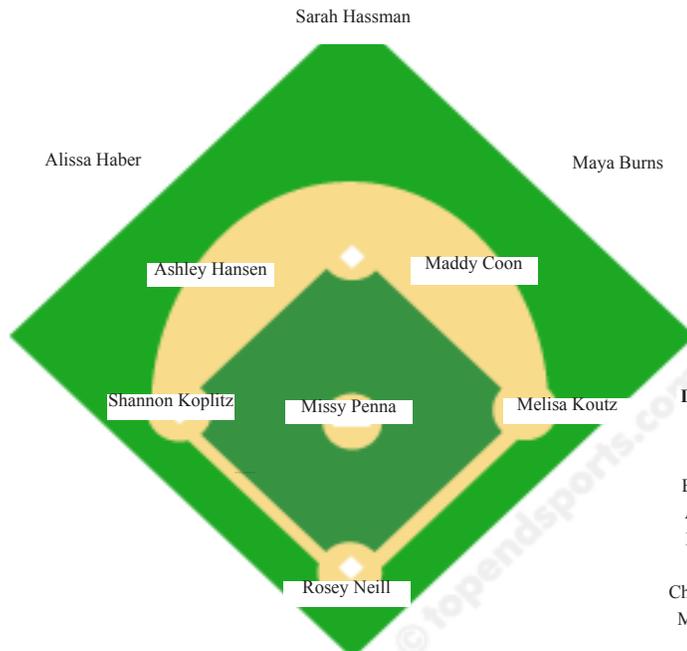

2008 IN REVIEW

Stanford is coming off a strong 2008 season in which it went 49-15 and finished fourth in the competitive Pac-10 Conference. The program posted its 10th 40-win season, recorded the second-most wins in school history, made its 11th-straight NCAA Tournament appearance and made a postseason run to its third NCAA Super Regional in four years. At the end of the year, eight players were honored with All-Pac-10 awards, four received all-region recognition and two - pitcher Missy Penna and outfielder Alissa Haber - were named All-Americans.

TEAM USA TIES

Head Coach John Rittman spent last summer on the coaching staff for the USA Team at the Beijing Olympic Games, marking his second appearance on the Olympic coaching staff. Two former Cardinal standouts, Jessica Mendoza '02 and Lauren Lappin '06, were on the squad that outscored opponents 58-5 over nine games and captured the silver medal. Current players Rosey Neill, Alissa Haber and Ashley Hansen are all veterans of the USA Junior National Team, and Hansen was the only high school player selected to participate in Team USA's Olympic Selection Camp in 2007.

Stanford's Hansen Holds True To Hype

By Graham Hays, ESPN.com

February 15, 2009

If you want to assign blame for the prevalence of hype in our modern world, there is plenty fairly handed out to those of us who persistently peddle it.

But save a little for enablers such as Stanford freshman Ashley Hansen. Because sometimes a player comes along who provides the hype-addicted their justification to keep peddling.

It turns out, this season's biggest brand name among incoming freshman position players is, in fact, every bit as good advertised. Actually, scratch that; she's even better.

Hansen arrived in Palo Alto, Calif., with the phrase "the only high school player invited to the United States national team selection camp in 2007" attached to her name as if it was the title of a member of Britain's royal family. And based on the way she tore through the Campbell-Cartier Classic at San Diego State during the second weekend of her college career, she may soon add the Pac-10 realm to her softball fiefdom.

"She is just a phenomenal ballplayer," Stanford coach John Rittman said. "She's a leader on the field as a freshman; she plays the game like a veteran. The toughest thing about Ashley is where to put her defensively because she plays a number of positions and she plays them all well. She's all that everyone talks about. I mean, if you just watch her work in practice, watch her work in the cage, watch her make adjustments at this level already, her coaches prior to her getting to Stanford have done an outstanding job with her. She's a special talent."

For the weekend, Hansen collected 10 hits and nine RBIs in four games and displayed range, soft hands and a strong arm at shortstop. She's hitting .531 through her first nine games, including three doubles, three triples and two home runs, with 17 RBIs.

Granted, a two-week introduction is a small sample size -- as Stephen Colbert might facetiously suggest, only time will tell if she's going to be a great player or the greatest player. But it's less hyperbole than logic to say she's going to be one of the most valuable players on the field for the next four years.

That she's already filling such a role speaks to an unusual combination of mental poise and physical polish of a player who won't turn 19 until after Pac-10 play begins. It's what comes from not only the memorable national team tryout but starring roles on teams that won the 2006 Junior Pan Am Championship and the 2007 Junior World Championship.

So while she shared any freshman's season-opening butterflies when she suited up for Stanford this spring, she had a unique reservoir of experience to call on while settling in. Neither the home run she hit in her first college at-bat nor the 0-for-4 effort in her second game shifted her out of gear. Nor, for that matter, did a misplaced step during infield drills before Friday's game against Long Beach State that sent her tumbling unceremoniously onto her posterior, much to the general amusement of her teammates. Even budding superstars have to deal with the occasional stumble.

"I mean, there were initial nerves at first," Hansen admitted. "And being at shortstop, that's a big leadership position. But I've been in a lot of pressure situations before, so it's kind of a challenge for me, and I enjoy challenges."

Forget the way the ball explodes off Hansen's bat; it reaches a point watching her play that when she takes three steps toward the left field corner, leaps and comes up inches shy of snaring a backhand liner, as happened Friday against Long Beach State, it's almost disappointing. Softball is a game governed by a probability of failure, especially for batters -- but even as a freshman, Hansen is one of those talents who has the mental and physical tools to make success seem like a certainty in almost any situation.

"It's pretty rare," Rittman said. "I've been coaching for a number of years, and there have been a few that have come through with that kind of work ethic, focus and just savvy on the ball field. It's fun to watch her play, and a coach, when you get one like that, you just enjoy it."

No wonder the national team wanted to make sure it had the right mailing address for someone it will be contacting for years to come. Even if that initial invite left the then-Arizona high schooler at more of a loss than college pitchers have yet managed.

"At first, I saw the envelope and thought it was for the junior team or something," Hansen recalled. "And I opened it up and I was like, 'Mom, uh, this is for the women's team.' So it was really just a lot of shock and excitement."

Fans of college softball will share those sentiments when they see her in action.

Swing And A Missy

By Kyle Kensing, NCAA.com

February 18, 2009

Stanford senior pitcher Missy Penna has lofty goals.

“Every year, the ultimate goal is to make the College World Series,” the Cardinal hurler said Sunday, the same day Stanford completed a perfect 4-0 showing at the Campbell-Cartier Classic in San Diego.

Big aspirations require a big arm, and the Cardinal have that in Penna.

She garnered Pac-10 Player of the Week honors Feb. 9. Her encore was a shutout of UC Santa Barbara Thursday, Penna’s third consecutive complete-game goose egg. One more shutout makes No. 36 for Penna, which would etch her name into the Cardinal record books as the all-time leader.

Penna wrapped up the weekend on as strong a note as it began, keeping No. 24 San Diego State in check after falling into a 2-0 hole. While she bore down, the offense rallied, leading the Cardinal to a convincing 9-2 final. Following the win, her ERA is a hair above one at 1.02, opponents are batting .148 against her and she has 68 strikeouts – an average of just below 10 a game.

With a pace like that, it’s no wonder Penna is the actively career leader for Ks with 971. She should eclipse 1,000 this weekend when Stanford plays its first home games of 2009, with the Cardinal slated to play six games in the Stanford Nike Invitational.

Penna’s early success this season has correlated into equal success for the squad. The SDSU victory pushed the Cardinal to 8-1 on the campaign and marked Stanford’s seventh consecutive win. For her efforts, Penna was nominated for a second straight conference Player of the Week honor.

“It’s nice to start on a strong note,” she said. “We did that last weekend [at the Kajikawa Classic in Tempe, Ariz.] and we want to continue on that weekend after weekend.”

Building momentum before conference play is critical, Penna said, because she and the rest of the Cardinal “knew how the Pac-10 was going to be before [the season] started.”

The road to Oklahoma City is paved through Pac-10 country -- the last three national champions are from that conference, and only two squads outside of it have captured the title this decade.

The conference features five teams currently in the top 10, with a sixth, Arizona, at No. 11.

“Every game is going to be a challenge,” Penna said. “We know every game, all season, is going to be a good game.

“We just want to bring enthusiasm to every game and leave it all on the field.”

Star Quality

By David Kiefer, Stanford Athletics
April 15, 2009

In three years together as Stanford's softball battery, catcher Rosey Neill still hasn't completely figured out pitcher Missy Penna.

"I don't think it's possible," Neill said.

Perhaps that's because there's so much to fathom. After all, didn't Penna believe her bike was stolen and then find it five months later, in the same place, and still locked?

And wasn't that Penna climbing the tree behind the post office by Tressider Union, picking oranges? And didn't she describe some of her hobbies as, "living in the wild" and "walks with no predetermined destination?"

"She's a very unique person," Stanford coach John Rittman said. "She enjoys life, and she gets the most out of it."

And she can pitch.

Penna has broken just about every pitching record in Stanford history and is the most prolific strikeout pitcher in the country, having long surpassed 1,000 for her career. Heading into this weekend's action, the senior from Miami, Fla., is 25-3 with a 0.90 earned-run average, 14 shutouts, and 247 strikeouts in 193 2/3 innings.

On April 3, Penna earned her 106th career victory, becoming the winningest pitcher in Stanford history and adding to a ledger of career, season and single-game records she already possesses.

"There are a lot of pitchers that throw harder than Missy," Rittman said. "Missy throws hard, but what makes Missy special and unique is the fact that her pitches break. When she's on, her movement is phenomenal."

Let Neill describe it.

"The one thing Missy can do that no one else can is throw the worst pitch ever and it'll still break eight inches," Neill said.

For example, Penna will throw a pitch called a "peel drop," but sometimes gets so excited she rolls over the ball too far on the delivery. The result is a pitch headed toward Neill's shoulder, and drops to her ankles.

"It's the dirtiest thing, but it's not really a good pitch," Neill said. "Yet, she's struck out many a player on that pitch. There's no way to hit it."

If that's Penna's worst pitch, imagine her best. That would be her dropball, a pitch that crosses the plate at the batter's knees and then dips into the dirt.

"It sounds mean, but we get to make some of the best hitters in the game look like buffoons," Neill said.

Despite her success, Penna can hardly be defined by softball. In fact, she can't be defined by much at all. That's because Penna is a true original, both on and off the diamond. Her mother can't visualize Missy ever sitting behind a desk, and Missy herself - a construction management and engineering major with a 3.49 cumulative grade-point average - can't see a future confined within four walls.

But whatever endeavor Penna undertakes, she will bring a gift of making others comfortable. It starts with her laugh, one that can simultaneously disarm and reassure.

Soon enough, Penna seems like a lifelong friend. At least that's how a Kazakh student who befriended Penna felt. When Penna returned to the dugout after retiring the side in a recent game, she found her foreign friend sitting on the team bench amid a collection of puzzled faces.

"She wanted to see me," Penna said. "It was so sweet."

No pretense, no ego, no script. Just Missy.

"She has a good heart," said her mother, Lori Penna. "She never, ever has anything unkind to say about people."

Perhaps that's why Lori was not surprised when she picked up the morning paper in Florida and saw her daughter's name in print, and it had nothing to do with softball. Rather, a squatter had been staying in Penna's dorm room for eight months pretending to be a Stanford student.

Claiming she didn't get along with her roommate and needing a place to stay, 18-year-old Azia Kim found compassion in Penna and Penna's roommate, and was allowed to sleep on the floor.

Penna began to wonder what was up when she returned from road trips to find her bed made, a sure sign it had been used. Missy, you see, never makes her bed.

When residence hall associates became suspicious, authorities were contacted and Kim was escorted away. Soon after, news of the ruse went coast to coast.

"That was the first time I heard about it," Lori Penna said. "And then I was getting phone calls from The Today Show and Entertainment Weekly."

Missy was perplexed, but not for the obvious reasons.

"I remember thinking it was strange," Missy said. "She couldn't get along with her roommate? I remember sleeping one morning and my roommate woke me up and said, 'Azia's not real.'"

"At the time, it seemed odd, but everyone has their own little quirks. I was more surprised she lied the whole time."

Missy sees the best in people. If anything defines her, Missy hopes it is her strong Christian faith. On one road trip, she wanted the team bus to wait because she had just discovered a nearby Christian book store and wanted to go inside.

Robert and Lori Penna, who own a health food store, raised their large family on an acre and a quarter, on a plot ringed with fruit trees and open enough for just about any kind of athletic activity. For five years, the family did not even own a TV, not because of any bias, but because it didn't need one.

Two of Missy's siblings played collegiate sports and her father wrestled at University of Florida. It was in this environment that Missy honed her competitive edge, becoming a three-sport star at Southwest Miami High. Lori recalls driving on family vacations, looking in the rearview mirror and seeing flailing arms and legs as Missy wrestled her brothers.

"She had no fear of anybody," Lori said.

Home-schooled through fifth grade, Missy found the biggest adjustment to conventional academic life was getting used to standing in line.

"In our family, we never had that," she said. "It's always the first to the front seat of the car, the bathroom, the table. If you're not ready for dinner, you miss out. You get the leftovers."

When one of Missy's friends came over for dinner, several kids asked the friend to bring them some water. When she returned to the table, the girl's entire plate of spaghetti was eaten, while several Pennas looked on innocently.

How does this translate to softball? Just watch Penna in the circle.

"I love the competitive nature of it," she said. "It's me versus the batter. Who's going to come out on top? Every pitch is like that. Every batter. Every game.

"I like being pushed to the limit, seeing where I can get to. Every day, I'm trying to get to a new level."

Neill may not have a handle on her friend's personality, but she doesn't need to. She knows enough.

"She's one of those quality human beings," Neill said. "There's really no other way to put it. She's a good person, she works really hard, and she's an awesome teammate. That's who she is."

Stanford Calls Pitches From The Field, Not The Dugout

By David Kiefer, Stanford Athletics

April 15, 2009

In collegiate baseball, having the catcher call pitches is almost unheard of. In softball, it's a bit more common, yet far from universal.

With the Stanford softball team, the responsibility is given to junior catcher Rosey Neill. Her calls and Missy Penna's pitches have been an effective combination. Stanford is 36-4 and ranked No. 2 in the nation.

"Rosey makes every pitch look good," Penna said. "She knows every batter's strengths and weaknesses."

Neill won the trust of head coach John Rittman and pitching coach Trisha Ford by midway through her freshman year.

"We're two days away from playing Arizona and I got a voicemail," Neill recalled, saying it went something like this:

"OK, Rosey, this is Coach Ford. I just wanted to let you know I've been talking to Coach and both of us think you're ready to call pitches. I have film on Arizona. Let's talk. Have a nice week."

Neill's reaction? "I immediately freaked out. Talk about being thrown into the fire."

That 2007 season began with Ford calling games, and then Neill making calls in practice. When the coaches felt she was ready, Neill began by calling some innings, and Ford others. Finally, Neill took over full time.

"Rosey is an extremely smart player and has really developed that aspect of her game," Ford said. "Once things were running smoothly, Rosey took over."

Ford says it works because Neill works hard extremely hard to make it so. She watches video of each opponent before each game and then discusses her impressions with Ford, as they determine a plan of attack.

"Coach Ford understands that there are things that I see that she's not going to see," Neill said. "It could be if a batter's on the plate vs. off the plate, or whether she moves four inches up the box between pitches. All of that matters.

"If the girl's up in the box, I'm going to throw a different sequence than if she's in the back of the box. To be honest, Coach Ford might call the pitches the exact same way. We joke and she says, 'I knew you were calling that.'"

Ford admitted an ulterior motive.

"I also believe that with Rosey calling, it promotes a great relationship between the pitcher and catcher," Ford said. "There is a lot of trust that comes with that responsibility and she has taken it in stride."

Neill said Ford will sometimes question a pitch, but when Neill explains her rationale, Ford most often is fine with it.

"As a catcher, I couldn't ask for a better pitching coach," Neill said. "I hear of pitching coaches and catchers not getting along, but it doesn't make sense to me. We're on the same team."

Freshman Sensation

By John Reid, Palo Alto Daily News
April 18, 2009

Stanford's Ashley Hansen speaks softly, but carries a big stick. While that turn of an old adage is in reference to a famous quotation by Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th president of the United States, it best describes Hansen, the Cardinal's freshman shortstop.

From the moment she stepped on the diamond at Stanford, Hansen has wielded a big stick at the plate. She's a major reason the Cardinal worked itself up to No. 2 in the nation, tying its highest ranking ever. Stanford (36-4, 6-3 Pac-10) — in first place through the first seven conference games — played first-place Arizona on Friday night in Tucson. The Cardinal is at Arizona State tonight and Sunday in Tempe, not far from Hansen's home base of Chandler.

"All of us have been working hard this whole season," Hansen said. "It feels nice to have that hard work pay off. We need to continue to get better every day because the season is far from over. The ranking is just a ranking. We need to prove it, as does everyone else."

Hansen has started every game for Stanford this season.

"I had to earn my spot in the fall just like everybody else," Hansen said. "We have a lot of good girls on this team who compete every day at practice."

Not since legendary Jessica Mendoza was a freshman in 1999 has a Stanford rookie had such an impact.

- Mendoza was the only Cardinal freshman to hit over .400, hitting .415 — Hansen's current batting average.

- Mendoza had 81 hits in 62 games in '99. Hansen has 59 hits in 40 games, tying her for the team lead with Alissa Haber.

- Mendoza was the first Cardinal named national player of the week. Hansen was awarded that honor in mid-February.

Hansen, who leads the team in RBIs with 39, tripled and hit her third home run of the season against Santa Clara on Tuesday. Her five triples leave her one short of Catalina Morris' single-season mark set in 2004. Hansen's 12 doubles are second on the team behind Haber.

Tough out

Hansen has struck out just nine times in 142 at-bats, perhaps the most telling stat about her. Translated: She is a tough out.

"We're always looking for Ashley to get on base, get some hits, somehow," Cardinal pitcher Missy Penna said. "She's always consistent."

In a recent home game against Cal, Hansen had a three-run double to ignite the Cardinal's 4-1 victory. She also singled and scored Stanford's other run.

"Hansen is a very good player," Cal coach Diane Ninemire said. "She was one of the leading high school kids coming out last year, so that's not a surprise. She's doing a very good job in the No. 2 spot for them."

Cardinal coach John Rittman is fully aware of what he has in Hansen.

"Ashley Hansen has been phenomenal for us," Rittman said. "She does not play like a freshman. She plays like a veteran who has been around this game a long time. We knew we were getting a great player. I just didn't know how great. She takes the game in stride and is a wonderful kid to coach. You kind of pinch yourself and just enjoy the four years you're going to have with her."

Hansen is only 5-foot-7, but she wields a mean aluminum club from the left side of the plate.

"Ashley is deceiving," Rittman said. "She has a lot of power, a lot of pop. She's a five-tool player. She can run, she can hit. She can hit for power, she can short-game. She plays great defense."

Rittman inserted Hansen at short and moved last year's shortstop, Maddy Coon, to second base.

"They're similar players," Rittman said. "Maddy is a more natural second baseman. Maddy has a lot of range at second and provides leadership on the right side of the field. Ashley plays shortstop like a veteran."

"Defensively, my biggest strength is communication," Hansen said. "I'm talking every pitch to the defense so they know where to throw the ball, where to go and just keep them in the game. Penna is dominating. That's why it's important to stay up, defensively. Because she's mowing down batter after batter, we still need that intensity just in case they put the ball in play."

Hansen has made eight errors this season, her fielding percentage at .926, not where she wants it to be.

"It was early in the season," Hansen said. "I was adjusting to collegiate athletes. They're stronger and faster. I was kind of rushing early in the year, but I've slowed down on my tempo. I'm getting used to Missy (Penna) and the balls that come off the bat with her. They have weird spins."

Powerful debut

In her first collegiate at-bat, Hansen hit a home run against McNeese State at the Kajikawa Classic in Tempe. Having starred at Corona del Sol High in Tempe, Hansen had quite a fan club in the stands that day. She had three RBIs and scored twice in that debut.

"My first at-bat was kind of cool," Hansen said. "I'll always remember that. My family and friends went crazy. It was kind of nice."

Hansen's softball coach at Corona del Sol, Jeep Ray, wasn't able to be at that McNeese game. She got a text message from her husband, who was at the game.

"Ashley Hansen was the best athlete I ever coached," Ray said. "She's well-rounded and comes from a wonderful family."

Hansen, a proven leader, was student body president and captained her softball and volleyball teams in high school. A three-time first-team all-state selection at catcher, Hansen was tabbed the state's softball player of the year in 2008. The Aztecs won three regional titles and were state runner-ups in 2006 and 2008. Hansen was part of an Aztecs volleyball team that was second in the state in 2006. Hansen was a straight-A student until she got involved with USA softball.

"That just took so much of her time," Ray said. "She got a couple of B's and she got upset. I told her that it's OK to get a B. That doesn't make you a bad person. It's hard to not like Ashley. She's a help on and off the field. She tutored a lot of students who needed help."

Hansen had three older sisters who came through Corona del Sol and played softball — Tammi, Tara and Megan. When Hansen was 8, she would announce Corona del Sol softball games, which might make her the youngest public address announcer in the world. She kept that announcing job until she was 12.

"Announcing my sisters' games kept me involved in the game," Hansen said. "They were a big influence on me playing softball."

Corona del Sol has produced some good catchers over the years, most notably Bri Kaiser ('98) and Megan Willis ('02). Kaiser played collegiately at Sam Houston State. Willis, a close friend of Megan Hansen, played for Texas, where she caught All-American pitcher Cat Osterman. Corona del Sol also produced current Stanford football lineman Allen Smith.

Great freshman class

Hansen is part of a tremendous freshman recruiting class. Besides Hansen, right fielder Maya Burns, designated player Jenna Becerra and center fielder Sarah Hassman are freshmen who start on a regular basis. Other freshmen on the roster are infielders Mary Kate Smith and Christina Goswiler.

"We all get along really well," Hansen said. "Playing in the Pac-10 is really fun. It's everything I expected. I knew I wanted to play in the Pac-10 all along. I had other offers, but Stanford was my first choice."

The best pitcher Hansen has faced in college has been Washington's Danielle Lawrie, a Canadian who pitched for Team Canada in the Beijing Olympics. Hansen went 2-for-5 the first time she encountered Lawrie.

"I try to come out mentally prepared and do my homework on the pitchers," Hansen said. "Watching Haber bat before me has helped me big-time."

Hansen led the the U.S. to the Junior Pan Am Championships in Puerto Rico in 2006. In 2007, she hit .483 to propel the U.S. to a gold medal at the Junior World Championships in Enschede, Holland. Hansen nearly had some Beijing Olympics experience when she was one of 32 players invited to the USA tryouts last summer. She soon will get another chance to make Team USA. She is one of 27 athletes invited to the national team's selection camp June 8-12 in Chula Vista. Another 15 invitees are soon to follow.

Hansen is confident the Cardinal will have some important business to take care of earlier that month. The Women's College World Series runs May 28-June 3.

"We'll be in Oklahoma City and we'll be there on that final day," Hansen said.

That's not speaking softly, but so far, Hansen has backed it up with a big stick.

Raising Her Game

By Daniel Bohm, Stanford Daily
May 1, 2009

The transformation could be seen as early as six games into the season. The Stanford softball team was playing in its first game of the Campbell/Cartier Classic in San Diego against UC-Santa Barbara. Junior outfielder Alissa Haber led off the game by laying down a perfectly placed bunt single. Then, five innings later, she blasted a two-run homerun to right-center.

Haber has definitely been seen bunting on occasion. She has also always shown modest strength, hitting six homeruns her sophomore year. It was on that February day, however, that the softball world saw Haber transform from great to one of a kind.

Sure, Haber was a third-team All-American as both a freshman and sophomore. But during both seasons, Haber's production waxed and waned from week to week, and she would sometimes find herself compounding problems, carrying one bad at-bat into her next few opportunities at the plate.

"During my first two years, if I had two bad games, I would get inside my own head and sometimes let it spiral into five or six games," Haber said.

Stanford coach John Rittman has noticed the change in Haber's mentality when things don't necessarily go her way.

"This year, Alissa has dealt with failure a lot better," he said. "She doesn't dwell on it; she bounces back and thinks about the next at-bat or the next game."

Haber's ability to rebound has been remarkable this year. Only twice all season has she been held hitless in consecutive games. This has translated into a consistent batting average all season — her mark of .438 currently leads the team.

Part of her ability to find her way on-base stems from the hard work she has put in to improve all aspects of her offensive game.

"I've really refined my offensive skills," Haber said. "I'm bunting more, especially because I got a bit faster in the offseason, so I feel like I can beat out bunt hits.

"When I'm slumping, I feel like I can turn to my short game to work my way on base," she added.

And Rittman is well aware of how much that means to his team.

"Alissa is tremendously versatile offensively," he said. "She sets the table for us in so many ways. She can bunt, she can slap and she has power, so she can give us a lead right off the bat."

Perhaps there is no better example of her contributions to the Cardinal offense than the aforementioned February contest against Santa Barbara. A year ago, you would not have found Haber bunting for a hit and hitting a homerun in the same contest. It simply wasn't a part of her game. Now, it is.

Haber's maturity at the plate has extended to other aspects of the game. In the offseason Rittman had Haber make the unglamorous switch from centerfield — where she had started the previous two years — to leftfield to make room for speedy freshman Sarah Hassman in center.

Rittman has had nothing but praise for the way Haber has handled the transition, claiming that she has not only shown great maturity and continued to be a team leader, but that she could be talented enough to play any of the outfield positions — or even first base, if need be.

For Haber, the transition has been seamless: She is the only Stanford regular yet to commit an error this season. Asked about the switch, Haber had nothing but good things to say about the addition to the team that prompted the switch.

“Sarah Hassman has been great,” Haber said. “She tracks the ball well, and as coach says, we have two centerfielders in the outfield.”

The biggest obstacle for the Stanford veteran in moving to the corner was continuing to be a team leader on the field, as she says that the centerfielder tends to be the team’s defensive leader. Rittman, however, has not seen any decrease in Haber’s leadership.

“Her teammates look up to her — she really takes on a leadership role,” he said. “She is a mentor to the younger players and possesses a lot of leadership qualities.”

Despite having one of the best seasons a Stanford softball player has ever had this year, Haber has shown no signs of becoming complacent, always looking to get better. She possesses what she describes as an “underdog mentality,” which prompts her to do whatever it takes to win.

Before her junior year, Haber improved her bunting and her speed. It must be scary to the rest of the Pacific-10 Conference to consider what may come next.

Stanford's Penna is giving a fine senior send-off

By John Ryan, San Jose Mercury News
May 5, 2009

As sports awards go, it's a valedictory of sorts: Stanford pitcher Missy Penna is the national player of the week according to both USA Softball and Louisville Slugger/NFCA, the second time this season she has achieved the double. She's the only player in school history to do it.

What a weekend it was: In front of her parents, grandparents, aunt and uncle, the senior from Miami allowed a total of one run and three hits in two games against high-powered Arizona State and Arizona.

The Cardinal's three-game sweep put it at 13-5, tied with UCLA atop the Pacific-10 Conference heading into the season's final weekend, with two road games against the Bruins after one at Washington. It could be the first outright conference championship in school history; the Cardinal shared the title in 2005.

But this wasn't graduation, and there's no time for a senior slide. The NCAA regional, super-regional and College World Series — to which Penna has never been — await.

"I know it's going to end," she said. "I've known it was going to end since the beginning of this year. I'm just trying to make every second count. I'm not trying to look back on it like, 'Oh, my season's ending.' "

It won't anytime soon if she keeps pitching the way she has. It would be wrong to say this is a one-woman team. But consider: Stanford is hitting .299, fourth in the conference, and averages almost a run less per game than UCLA. The Bruins have out-homered the Cardinal 71-39.

But Penna and Ashley Chinn, a sophomore from Carlmont High, have made the runs hold up. Penna is 31-4 with a 1.35 ERA, 33 complete games and 310 strikeouts in 2441/3 innings for a team that is 44-6. (Chinn is 13-2 with a 1.91 ERA.)

Penna owns school records for victories, strikeouts and shutouts, and she is the only current NCAA pitcher with at least 1,200 career K's. Now it's about putting Stanford in the CWS for the first time since 2004.

And after that ... life. It's worth noting that, unlike many of the collegians we write about whose careers are ending, this truly is the end. Professional options for a softball player are very limited, and the sport has been eliminated from Olympic competition.

No problem. Penna is finishing her degree in civil engineering, and she'll stay on at Stanford as a graduate student.

"I knew pretty much coming into school that this would be it, I would have four years and I would probably be done after that," she said.

She certainly didn't waste any of those four years.

Freshman Hansen Becomes Cardinal Spark In First Season

By Nate Adams, Stanford Daily

May 6, 2009

A brief glance at the Stanford softball team's statistics chart reveals plenty of stunning numbers and talented players, from Missy Penna — who ranks among the nation's top 10 in three pitching categories — to some of Stanford's best power hitters of all time in Alissa Haber, Rosey Neill and Shannon Koplitz.

Perhaps most impressive of them all, though, is a young player posting nearly team-best numbers in almost every offensive category in her first year with the team — shortstop Ashley Hansen.

Just a freshman, Hansen leads her team in triples and RBI, has the fewest strikeouts and most at-bats of any regular starter and is on pace to be just the second Cardinal player to ever bat over .400 on a season.

So where did this phenom come from?

For Hansen, a versatile athlete, the road to college softball was one of many options. The Arizona-native was practically raised on the game, following in the footsteps of her three softball-playing sisters, from tee ball at age three to a traveling club team at just six. She went on to dabble in various sports, but was ultimately drawn to the softball diamond above all else.

“In middle school, I played volleyball and basketball and continued to play volleyball through my senior year in high school,” Hansen said. “Softball has always been my calling, though. I just love how it's a combination of a team and individual sport. You get your moment in the spotlight every time you come up to the plate, but you also know that your teammates will always be there to pick you up, too.

Hansen's commitment to the game paid off in a big way early in her high school career, giving her some once-in-a-lifetime opportunities. Hansen led the Worth Firecrackers club team to two ASA national championship games and was a key member of a U.S. Junior National Team that won the Pan American Championship in Puerto Rico in 2006. Just a year later, she batted .483 for the gold-medal U.S. team at the World Championships in Enschede, Holland.

Grateful for such unique opportunities, Hansen cites them as a major catalyst for her growth as a player.

“I have been surrounded with some of the best softball players in the country on both club and national teams, and my coaches there taught me much more than the fundamentals of the game,” Hansen recalled. “They made me more mentally tough. Any opportunity to play in that type of big game gives you the experience to grow and develop as a player and prepares you for the next step: college.”

When the time came for Hansen to take that step and commit to a particular school, her choice was easy to make. Stanford, she said, is the perfect place for her.

“I knew it was the right fit for me,” Hansen said. “The campus is absolutely beautiful, the weather is much better than the scorching heat in Arizona and it has the academics and the athletic department that I have dreamed about. Why wouldn't it be Stanford?”

Hansen's impact on the Cardinal team was immediate and profound. She belted a three-run home run in her first at-bat as a college player, and continued to put up solid numbers even in clutch situations, including a bases-clearing double to defeat Cal on April 9. Her coach, John Rittman, couldn't be more pleased with her contributions to the team.

“She understands the game,” Rittman emphasized. “She understands defenses, coverages; she knows how to cater her play to a certain hitter and get in position, and knows when to be on the move and where. And offensively, she leads the team in triples and almost in doubles. Just look at the stats. She's an outstanding young player.”

Beyond the numbers, though, Hansen's impact can be seen in her sense of camaraderie and her mature approach to the game. Junior catcher Rosey Neill, who had a chance to play with Hansen before her career with the Cardinal, had nothing but praise for her integrity and character.

"I was teamed up with her in Puerto Rico and then later in Holland, so I had a chance to play with her before we even put on a Stanford uniform together," Neill explained. "I could tell from the start that she was a good kid, so when I knew she was committing [to Stanford], I was definitely really excited. She's a hard worker, and always puts in the effort at practice. She's just a good kid, a great teammate."

Rittman, considering himself fortunate to coach Hansen, has been very impressed by her poise and determination.

"She's very mature for her age, and she's a team player and a great communicator," Rittman said. "We're very blessed to have her in our program. As a coach, you couldn't ask for a better player to work with, on and off the field."

Hansen, in return, is just as thankful to have teammates that she thinks are fantastic, and looks forward to closing out the season with them.

"I couldn't have asked for a better group of girls," Hansen explained. "Our team's camaraderie is amazing, and it makes the sport that much more enjoyable to play every day. We've had a fantastic season, and we are still on a mission as it wraps up. Our main focus is to take things one game at a time and play our best game on any given day. If we do that, we have the tools to beat any opponent in this country."

Freshman Big Part Of Stanford Softball Success

By Michelle Smith, San Francisco Chronicle

May 9, 2009

To say that Ashley Hansen was born and raised on softball is not overselling it.

When Ashley came into the world, her 10-year-old sister was already playing. She had a ball in the hand by the time she could walk. She was 8 years old when she took over the microphone in the scorer's booth and started announcing her older sisters' high school games.

As a 7-year-old, she played on a 10-and-under traveling team. And last year, she was the only high school senior to be invited to camp with the U.S. women's national team.

Overachiever? Prodigy? Hard-driving athlete?

All of the above.

The Chandler, Ariz. native is having perhaps the best season of any freshman in the nation for the Cardinal, coinciding with one of the best seasons in program history.

The Cardinal are 44-8, 13-7 in the Pac-10 and on the road this weekend, tied with Washington for second place. Stanford was eliminated from conference championship contention Friday when UCLA clinched the title with a 1-0 win. The Bruins scratched out an unearned run in the fourth and Stanford left the bases loaded in the seventh. The Cardinal and Bruins meet today in the regular season finale.

Stanford will find out its place in the NCAA tournament field Sunday.

"I've been playing club ball since I was 6, traveling and all that," Hansen said. "Softball has consumed my past 13 years. This is what I've been working for and it's finally come to the point where I'm ready."

Ready to set course on an exceptional career, it would appear. Hansen's first-year numbers are comparable to Jessica Mendoza when she arrived on the Farm 10 years ago. Mendoza turned out to be a four-time All-American and two-time Olympian.

Hansen, who has started in all 52 games this season, was one of the most coveted recruits in the nation, though she had her eyes on Stanford since she was a freshman in high school. Stanford coach John Rittman said he knew he was getting a "special player."

Hansen ranks second on the team with a .398 average, with 74 hits and 18 doubles.

Slightly built at 5-foot-6, the shortstop can also hit for power with five triples and four homers. She homered in her first collegiate at-bat in February.

"There's no doubt about it," Rittman said. "She plays well beyond her years. She's put up some great numbers, but it's not only her stats. It's her leadership on the field, her work ethic, her hustle. She only knows one speed."

Which would explain how much ground she covered in high school. Hansen balanced the demands and travel of club softball - as well as a stint with the U.S. junior national team - with serving as Corona Del Mar High's volleyball team captain, the student-body president and the editor of the yearbook.

Her family would hit the road at 2 a.m. to get to a tournament on a Saturday morning in order to make sure she could go to a football game or a dance the night before.

"They wanted to make sure I could enjoy the typical high school thing," Hansen said. "I wanted to do everything."

Kevin Hansen, Ashley's father, raised four daughters who played softball from youth leagues to college. He said there were occasions he thought maybe they could use a break.

"There were times when I'd say, 'Let's go skiing,' or 'Let's go take a boat on the water,' and they would say 'How are we going to work that around softball?' " Kevin Hansen said. "This has always been her choice." Kevin Hansen said his daughter is a "bring-it-on" person.

"A lot of people play like, 'Please don't hit it to me,' " Kevin Hansen said. "She's always wanted the hardest hit, or to make the hardest play."

Hansen said she was not even intimidated by her experience last summer as the only high school senior invited to the U.S. team camp. She laughed with team veteran Lisa Fernandez when Fernandez did the math and figured out that she was old enough to be Hansen's mother.

She'll try out again for the U.S. team in June, the only college freshman invited so far.

"When I first got the letter from (USA Softball), I thought it was from the junior team," Hansen said. "It was complete shock. Once you get to that point, there's nothing to lose. You have to leave everything out there at those tryouts."

Feet on Ground, Stats Soaring

By Mike Antonucci, Stanford Magazine
May/June 2009

Alissa Haber puts up statistics that are nothing less than flamboyant, which is about as weird a juxtaposition as possible in the life of such a down-to-earth individual.

But after the first 30 games of this year's softball season, her offensive stats were glowing like an aurora borealis in the outfield. The junior left fielder was batting close to .500, had a squad-leading 23 extra-base hits (including five home runs) and was 10-for-11 in stolen base attempts. While she was doing all that, the team split a pair of games on opening day and then won 28 straight.

Nothing in Haber's demeanor comes across anywhere near as flashy as her hitting. Her competitive intensity is obvious in the way she analyzes every nuanced aspect of her play and the sport, but her conversation is dappled with laughter and genial little personal revelations. She's just so good a player that her performance is showier than anything in her nature.

Haber, in the running for an array of postseason honors, hits leadoff and regards it as an opportunity to assume responsibility beyond having a successful at-bat. "You get to set the tone," she says. "You get to see a lot of pitches. That's kind of the goal, see as many pitches as you can, so that way, if you do get out, you can go back to your teammates and say, 'Look, here's what she's throwing, here's what she threw me, here's what working, here's what not.' I like being in that leadership role."

Raised in Newark, Calif., Haber was a Stanford softball fan before she was 10. When she matured into a player targeted by college recruiters, there never was any doubt about her decision if accepted for admission: "Always Stanford." After arriving, she made an immediate impact on the field while gradually learning how to cope with the full measure of the Stanford challenge.

"I had a really, really rough first two years academically," notes Haber. "I mean, I passed all my classes. But I definitely wasn't used to it, and I tried to be premed, which was a mistake. But I'm a junior now. I've gotten used to it. I've found something that I like to do. I enjoy going to classes."

Haber is an English major with an emphasis in creative writing. The joy she has found in that is her reward for the stick-to-itiveness that's also central to her personality.

"She was a very highly competitive kid. In the classroom, everywhere, she's always been highly competitive. And she got that from me," says her father, Dave Haber, who was a national champion high jumper at CSU-Hayward (now CSU-East Bay).

"When I grew up," he continued, "I didn't know sometimes how to deal with that competitiveness. I was able to know what she was going through and was able to rein her in and say, 'You gotta relax. You're fine, you'll be successful.'"

Spectacularly, as it turns out.

Describe your experience at the Olympic selection camp last year. Is there a player on the national team that you especially look up to?

The experience I had at the selection camp was unforgettable. When I received the letter from USA Softball, I was in complete shock. I kept rereading it looking for the "junior" before the words "women's national selection camp", but when I realized that it was for the actual Olympic team, I ran down and told my mom. It was such a great experience overall. At first, being the youngest one there, I was a little nervous taking the field with the people I grew up admiring, but as the week progressed and I got to know everyone, I realized that I had nothing to lose at this tryout and just had fun playing softball. One player that I particularly admire is a Stanford alum of course, Jessica Mendoza. I not only look up to how she plays the game but I also admire her accomplishments off the field and what she gives back to the community.

Describe your fellow freshmen for those of us who don't know them. What does each of the other five bring to the team?

The great class of 2012! I'll just go alphabetically here so, Jenna Becerra. She is an extremely talented player and will bring us a lot of versatility on the field. She has been moved around all over the place this fall and works hard at each and every position she plays. She brings a great personality off the field as well and is always laughing and cracking jokes. Maya Burns is another talented player with a lot of versatility. She is very vocal on the field (and off as well), and brings a great, light-hearted attitude to each and every practice. She has a great arm from behind the plate as well as in the outfield. Christina Goswiller has a ton of power at the plate and is a great first baseman. She is for the most part very quiet off the field but is one of the nicest girls you'll ever meet. Sarah Hassman brings tons of speed to our team. She is a tremendously talented outfielder and makes tough plays look easy. She is extremely funny and has the best sarcasm ever, giving her the nickname "Sassman" for her sass. Mary Kate Smith is another powerful hitter at the plate. She is very outgoing and fun to be around off the field.

Tell us the story about chipping your tooth before the first fall game.

The day before our first fall game, we were practicing and hitters were taking live batting practice off Coach Al. Jenna hit a hard ground ball up the middle while I was playing short and as I went to field it, it took a nasty hop right into my mouth. I knew my lip was bleeding and then I realized part of my tooth was on my tongue. My parents were coming up to watch the games so conveniently they took me to the dentist the next day and I got it fixed in time for the game. Nothing like this has ever really happened before and looking back on it, it was a pretty funny freak accident.

Talk about playing your first college game back home in Arizona. How have you adjusted to life in California?

Playing my first college game in my hometown is very exciting. This is what I have spent the past 12 years of my life preparing for, and I couldn't be more ready to take the field in the Cardinal uniform than now. It will be very comforting having my family and friends in the stands cheering me on. Two years ago, I watched Stanford play for truly the first time at the Kajikawa Classic and it's still somewhat surreal knowing that I will be wearing the uniform now. I guess the biggest difference between Arizona and California would have to be the amazing weather year round here. It's nice being able to wear winter clothes for longer than 4 weeks.

You were a very highly recruited player out of high school and probably had a lot of college choices. So far, are you glad you chose Stanford? What have you enjoyed most about your college experience so far?

I knew three years ago when I stepped onto Stanford's campus for the first time that this was the place for me. And so far, that hasn't changed. The campus is absolutely beautiful and walking out of my dorm every morning to see Hoover Tower is always a good start to my day. I enjoy the challenge of the classes here and the professors are amazing and super supportive. Softball has been everything I could hope for and the team gets along so well and we all have so much fun together.

What's your outlook for the 2009 season?

I'm looking forward to this season. I think our team has a lot of talent and high expectations to reach the highest level we can. We have a lot of versatility, power and speed on both offense and defense. I can't wait to see where this season takes us!

Tell us about your interest in boxing. How did that come about?

Hmmm...the whole boxing thing. At my high school we were required to do a senior project to graduate. So, I decided to learn how to box with the intent to participate in a match at the conclusion of my training. I luckily found a set of incredible coaches at my brother's gym who agreed to train me and help me through the process. I started training September of my senior year. At first, it was like 2 times a week for 30 minutes. I just learned the basics: different punches (jab, right, uppercut, etc.), footwork, blocking, and breathing correctly (in through the nose while pushing out your stomach). Then around the second month of training, I began to do controlled sparring with my coaches. The training sessions began to get much more physically demanding and more often. Honestly, I've never done anything so difficult in my entire life. I have all the respect in the world for martial artists. At the end of my training (the 6 month mark), I was training everyday for at least half hour with my coaches, going to the gym 2 times a week, and doing roadwork (jogging like Rockaaayyy) 2 to 3 times a week (along with travel ball and high school softball). I was also on a really strict diet, so that I wouldn't get demolished when it came time to find someone to fight. The whole process-learning how to fight, making some amazing friends in my coaches and in the martial arts community, the accomplishment of doing something that physically demanding, and the actual fight...was incredible. Very few things (namely a world series ring) could top the experience of my training and fight. I don't really get to train that much anymore. Whenever I go back home, though, I get to spar and work out with my coaches, but it isn't anything serious. I would, however, LOVE to begin training for another fight (hint, hint to my wonderful coaches back home). Haha. I haven't really shown my teammates or coaches (more importantly) any serious boxing skills. Coach and I wrestle around and throw some fake punches every once in a while, all the time with him insisting he could destroy me if we went a few rounds...yeah yeah yeah. "Mamma said Knock you out!!!!"

Is there anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I wouldn't say I am "addicted" to anything, but man do I love to 1) sleep and 2) play video games with some great classic rock turned up really loud. I can sleep ANYWHERE at any time of day. The feeling of snuggling up to something (the corner of a room, the floor, the couch, chairs) is fabulous. I could totally match the sleeping patterns of a sloth in captivity (i.e. 16 hours on, 8 hours off). I actually almost missed the flight to play at Washington once because I was curled up on the floor and nobody saw me to awaken me from slumber. I am, as you have probably guessed, reminded of this every once in awhile on road trips. Classic video games and classic rock...there isn't much else to say about that.

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about?

I am pretty sure that almost everyone got the same questions for their admissions essays...so here's a kind of fun one - Discuss an academic interest and how you could pursue it in the future (or something like that): I've always been really into how colors influence people's actions (subconsciously). I really don't know that much about the subject, but as an athlete, it would be interesting to do research about how the color of a team's uniforms subconsciously influence their opponent. Think about it the same way a bull fighter taunts a bull with the color red. In some states, it is illegal to paint the locker rooms red for fear of "taunting the bulls" before they go out to play. So, I think it would be fun research to make the color of uniforms become a factor or section of a team's statistical analysis (how many losses did they have to teams who wore blue? are blue teams lulling their opponents into a subconscious sense of security?). Who knows. It would be fun to play with the numbers, though.

Is there one particular story or event that has affected who you are today?

There is one event that made a huge impact on my life. I was 8 years old, and it was my birthday. We were at some version of a popular pizza place, except with a less disgusting figurehead (i.e. a bear instead of a rat). I was really into power rangers at the time, and my uncle was helping me win tickets to get this awesome metallic-lined green ranger action figure. Long story short, I got my power ranger (obviously because my patient uncle played a million video games to help me get it). After getting my prize, I immediately went over and started bragging to my best friend about my new toy. I must have been incredibly obnoxious and rude because my uncle politely scolded me about bragging and gave me some careful instruction on the importance of humility and about talking about oneself. I guess a mixture of how much I respect my uncle and the timing of the scolding (at my birthday party in front of my best friend) really changed the way I approach patting myself on the back or talking about myself. Don't do it!!

What is the most interesting job you've ever had? Any funny stories from the experience?

I worked at the bookstore on weekends for four or five hours a day in the fall. The funny part, though, is that I worked in customer service. Anyone who knows me knows that I am not really a people person...to people I don't know anyway. I am kind of disgruntled, sarcastic, and altogether unpleasant to be around. The people in customer service are kind of the jacks of all trades: we are cashiers, phone answerers, university guides, and personalities. I am also a really relaxed person. I wear what I want. I walk barefooted when I can, and I say pretty much what comes to mind. So, wearing business casual clothing, with dress shoes, and having to be nice to people all day wasn't the easiest thing to do. There was this one time (the day I was leaving for winter break) that this kid came in trying to sell back some books...the conversation goes as such:

uptight boy: "Can you guys give me money for these?"

irritable customer service employee/softball player: sassy toned "Are you trying to return books you bought before the quarter...3 months ago?"

utb: "No. I, uh, want to sell them back."

icesp: rings up books to get prices. all the books are over 100 dollar textbooks. "Okay. This one is for 10 dollars. This is 3 dollars."

utb: "WHAAAAATTTT?!?!? Are you serious? That's ridiculous. I bought those books for such and such amount" bangs his hand on the counter.

icesp: "Hey there!! You need to simmer down man. I don't make the prices. I don't decide the level of demand for your book. I ring them up and tell you how much they aren't worth anymore. okay! Have a nice day."

utb: "Can I still sell the books back?"

Hahaha.

What is something that you are NOT good at?

I'm a really bad cook. I'm living in an apartment this year and haven't cooked for myself a single time. I was planning on making spaghetti one night so I boiled pasta and just threw the tomato sauce in and it tasted horrible! I was making it for my roommate and myself and she didn't even want to eat it. I mean, who messes up spaghetti?

Being from the Bay Area, were you a Stanford fan growing up? Did you have a favorite Stanford softball player?

As a local kid, I was always a fan of Stanford. Tori Nyberg was my favorite player because she was from my town and went to the high school I would attend. I came to a couple camps when I was younger. There was one pitching camp I went to where there were so many of us that there wasn't enough room for everyone to pitch on the dirt, so some pitchers got moved to left field. I was one of them and totally tore up the grass with my drag! The coaches were freaking out about it and I never really understood why until I became a player here.

You listed one of your hobbies as surfing. Are you a good surfer?

I've been surfing a couple times and I wouldn't say I can really surf, but I know how to. The first time I went with a couple friends at Santa Cruz and was about to get up on my board but my hands were too far forward and I pushed the nose of the board down instead of the center of it. I got taken under just as a set of waves was coming in, so just as I was coming up for air another wave would crash on me and take me under. It happened about three times but it was really scary.

Is there you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I absolutely love food. Last year, my teammates would jokingly give me a hard time because during games, I was constantly eating all the snacks we had available for us in the dugout. One of my favorite foods is probably ribs. I order ribs A LOT when we're on the road...a full rack. And I always finish them. I kind of surprise myself, and possibly others, with the amount of food I eat. All the girls on the team know that I love ribs, and it's gotten to the point where they're a little surprised when I order something different. I get hassled about the amount of food I eat, but what can I say? I love food.

What's the best vacation you've ever taken or favorite vacation spot?

I think my favorite vacation spot would have to be Sorrento and Capri, Italy. I've been there the last two summers. The first time was just with my mom and this past year was with both my parents. It's very relaxing and beautiful and I especially love the laid-back culture and lifestyle of Italy. The scenery there is absolutely breath-taking and unlike anything I've seen before.

How did you start playing softball? Were you always a pitcher?

I started playing softball when I was nine because all my friends at school would always talk about how much fun they had together on the same team. However, the following year when I joined my friends, they all decided to go play soccer. The first year I played, we had a really dominating pitcher and everyone defined the team with her name, saying it was her team. So I decided I wanted that to be me and picked up pitching the next year.

Autumn AlbersBeing from the Bay Area, were you a Stanford fan growing up? Did you have a favorite Stanford softball player?

I wasn't really a fan of any college in particular during my childhood, but for some reason I always wanted to come to Stanford. The only memory I have of a player I admired is when I watched Kira Ching play on television. Kira used to do infield footwork classes with my older brother who played baseball when they were younger, so I was always excited to see her on TV! I came to one Stanford softball camp when I was about 12 with my entire club team. It's pretty hazy, but I remember running around to a lot of different stations.....now that I have worked Stanford camps, I guess that is kind of what we do. Unfortunately, I was converted into a Cal fan during middle school when my older brother decided to attend Cal (booooo!). But luckily, after coming here, I have been fixed and have moved away from the dark side!

What is something that you're NOT good at?

I am really really bad at figuring out how things work. This sounds really silly and like it wouldn't be a problem, but I honestly have so much trouble figuring out how to open doors (especially car doors), trying to put together those cardboard boxes that you have to fold in certain ways (I actually failed at this once during a summer job), and getting electrical appliances connected in all of the right places. Whenever I try to open anything that has any levers or bolts (like windows or gates), I get really confused. A few weeks ago in my biology lab, I couldn't figure out how to turn the microscope on at all, and I had to get someone to help me find the little power switch on the side of it! It gets so embarrassing. On a positive note, my teammate Maya Burns tried to sprint (very very quickly) out of a gate that said "pull" by pushing it last weekend, so there is hope that I am not alone in my struggles.

Tell us about being vegan. Do you cook much for yourself? What's your favorite vegan dish? Have you managed to hook your teammates on any of your favorite foods?

I became a vegan about 5 years ago after stumbling across some research about the food industry. Prior to being vegan, I was a vegetarian for about 7 months, and I haven't eaten beef for about 7 years because I absolutely love cows! I am always sad that softball keeps me from being a true vegan because of all of the leather involved! At Stanford, I don't really cook that often because I don't have a lot of free time, but I love cooking gourmet vegan meals when I am at home. My favorite dish is probably steamed brown rice. It is soooo yummy and I eat it almost every day! Most of my teammates are still pretty skeptical about my vegan foods, but I most definitely have gotten Ashley Chinn hooked on tofurkey sausage (delish!), and about half of the team was willing to try a vegan cheesecake I made a few months ago.

Is there anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I am addicted to jigsaw puzzles! When I was little, I used to take all of my Disney princess puzzles out, mix the pieces together, and do them upside-down. I don't do them upside down anymore, but now I have a rule where I can't look at the box. Over spring break I am planning to do a 3000 piece puzzle in my free time, and I am pumped! Most people tend to think my obsession with puzzles is a bit strange, so whenever I find someone else who shares this love with me (Sarah Hassman), I get really excited!

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about? Is there one particular story or event that has affected who you are today?

My big Stanford essay was about this really awesome leadership seminar that I have been involved with for the past 4-5 years. It is called NCYLS (Northern California Youth Leadership Seminar), and it basically is just a really awesome weekend long conference for sophomore high school students that provides a really inspiring environment that encourages young people to instigate change in their communities. NCYLS has honestly been one of the most influential and defining experiences of my life and has introduced me to some of the best friends that I could ever ask for. I am really hoping that I will get the chance to go back this year because I never feel as happy as when I am in the NCYLS environment!

What was the best vacation you've ever taken?

My favorite vacation was going to Victoria, Canada to see my aunt and uncle. It was absolutely beautiful, and is by far one of the most amazing places I have ever visited. It is an island, so everything is by the water, and there are tons of big green trees. The weather is really nice, and there is so much to do. My favorite thing that we did there was going whale watching. Being able to spend time in such a breathtaking place with my aunt and uncle who are so special to me was really awesome, and I hope that I will be able to do it again!

How did you start playing softball? Any funny stories about playing when you were younger?

I definitely don't think anyone expected me to ever play softball when I was little. I was a huge girly girl, and loved dancing and ice skating and singing and gymnastics. I got dragged to both of my older brothers' baseball games ALL the time, and I hated it so much. One of my funniest early softball memories was during my rec league's all star game. I was playing pitcher's helper (because back then our dads pitched to us), and a pop fly got hit straight up in the air to me. I totally lost it in the sun and it came straight down and hit me in the face. It didn't really hurt because it was one of those soft incrediballs, but I was really embarrassed that I dropped the ball and started crying. It was awful because all of the parents thought that I was crying because my face hurt from being hit by the ball and started offering me ice to put on it.

Describe where you're from. What is the biggest difference between California and New York?

I am from Chappaqua, New York, or better known as the `qua. The `qua has been the place of residence for several notable people including Betty White and the Clintons. It was also the home place of Horace Greeley, known for coining the famous term "go west young man" in which I followed his advice by coming to Stanford. Stanford has proved to be very different than growing up in New York. People are a lot nicer here, and a rainy day is a reason to freak out.

Describe something you're NOT good at.

I am not good at speaking. Most of my teammates would agree that I actually have my own language. Most of this dates back to when I was younger and taught myself how to spell. I broke down words in my head to make them easier to spell but now I have a hard time saying them with the appropriate emphasis on the right syllables. For example, I say "THERMO-meter" and "tiiiiv" (instead of tv).

Who do you live with? Why do you think you make good roommates?

This year I live with Alissa Haber and two women's basketball players, Jayne Appel and JJ Hones. We have the coolest room in Mirrielees. Jayne is the tall one of the group so she lays claim to all the highest cabinets and shelves. JJ has the most friends so she is barely ever in the room. And then there is Haber and I - we are the funny ones of the room but we always end up being the only ones laughing at our own jokes.

Do you have any hidden talents?

I can call a home run before it happens, and I have been right almost every time in my four years here at Stanford. My most legendary called shot was our extra-inning win against ASU last season. Melissa Koutz had an 0-2 count and I got a feeling that she was going to hit the next pitch out. I leaned over to my teammate Shannon Koplitz and shouted "Home Run!" as the ball left the pitchers hand, and Koutz hit that very pitch over the right field fence.

How did you start playing softball? Any funny stories about playing when you were younger?

I started my career playing baseball, and I actually liked it a lot more than playing softball for a long time. I started in tee-ball when I was about 5 years old on the San Francisco Giants. My first softball team was the 10 and under Chappaqua Heat and we lost every game (except for the very last game) that season to our dreaded rival the Brewster Rockets. Winning that last game against them felt like winning the World Series! The girls I played with on that Chappaqua Heat team are the girls I played with all the way through high school, and some are still my closest friends.

Melisa Koutz

Describe something that you're NOT good at.

I personally think I am an okay singer/rapper, but according to other people I am not. I love rapping or singing any song I hear while I am in the car, especially by myself. However, I was in the car once with one of my good guy friends and as I was rapping "Palmdale" by Afroman I did not realize he was recording it. A few days later he thought it would be funny to show our other friends and as I watched I realized that maybe I should keep my dream of being a rapper and touring with Kanye West to myself.

Is there anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I am addicted to a few things, but there is one thing I will admit I am absolutely obsessed with. My biggest obsession is the TV show "One Tree Hill". I have watched every episode, from the first one ever aired to the episodes being aired now. I got hooked after watching the first episode because of Chad Michael Murray and James Lafferty. Plus it is an amazing show all around! I used to have One Tree Hill posters all over my room, bought every single season DVD, own the shows soundtracks, and can talk forever about the show. And to this day I swear I am going to marry James Lafferty.

Describe your hometown. If you were to take someone on a tour of the area, where would you go?

It was not until I left my hometown that I realized how much I miss it. I grew up in the Santa Clarita Valley, and more specifically Valencia/Saugus area. If I was showing someone my hometown I would take them to Six Flags Magic Mountain, the mall, Saugus High School, Lombardi's Ranch, Golden Spoon and Pinkberry. But the necessary spots to go are probably Magic Mountain and Golden Spoon!

Is there one particular story or event that has affected who you are today?

I cannot really remember one event that affected who I am today, but I know it was all the occurrences with my parents and I involving sports, specifically playing for my dad, listening to his stories about his experiences growing up, and hanging out with my dad learning baseball, football and basketball. Also playing soccer as competitively as I played softball until I was 14, meaning playing travel softball and club soccer at the same time, helped mold me into the person I am today, especially with my aggressiveness.

What's the best vacation you've ever taken or favorite vacation spot?

The best vacation spot I have ever been to is not really for a vacation but somewhere I went for a softball tournament. We were playing in Normal, Illinois, but after the tournament we went to Chicago. I fell in love with that city. My dad and I went to Navy Pier, Soldier Field, Wrigleyville and to a Cubs' game. We took the L train around there too which I thought was awesome because until then I have never been on a train...I am from Southern California! I think I was about 14 and even though I loved every part of Chicago, I fell in love with Wrigleyville. The whole experience was straight from an old baseball movie. It was special because I got to go to experience the whole thing with my dad and my grandpa has always been a huge Cubs fan. Also it was the last tournament that my dad coached me at for travel ball.

What is the most interesting project/field trip you've done for a class?

I do not really remember an interesting field trip, but the best field trip I have ever been on was senior year when I went to the Long Beach Aquarium. It was awesome because I got to be with my best friend and my best guy friends for the entire day. Also when we got down there we pretty much did whatever we want which included petting the sea animals and going to lunch at the boardwalk down there. The trip was just all around memorable from the bus ride, to hanging out down there, and then it also happened to be where the prom was held a couple months later, which was one of my all-time favorite memories from high school, along with powderpuff football.

How did you start playing softball?

I started playing softball because of my dad. I just remember being very active with numerous sports when I was younger and my dad always coaching me with softball. Specifically I remember hitting a wiffle ball off the tee in my backyard and always trying to hit it in my neighbor's yard over the fence to show I was better than my sister....which I always was! I was a pitcher for about 5-6 years. I started off as a catcher because my favorite player was Mike Piazza and he was the catcher for the Dodgers at the time. But I would always get frustrated with the pitchers so I decided to try that, and was a pitcher/SS /third baseman for a long time. I loved pitching and was always the pitcher for the Hart tournament teams. I remember my dad and I having an interesting relationship when I pitched though. Being a pitcher was also how I got my nickname Riss because he would sometimes get frustrated with me when he called pitches that somehow that name slipped out and has stuck ever since. I think one of my favorite stories from when I was younger was when I was like 9 pitching for the Dodgers (my dad's team) at our local softball/baseball league, and of course I was always young for the league I played in. But I remember the opening game for the season was warming up, throwing with my dad, and I could not throw a strike if my life depended on it. I kept launching the ball over his head and he was getting rather mad at me. That continued through the entire warm up. But then once I got in a game I think I threw a no hitter and pitched really well, striking out many. That is definitely one of my favorite memories because, as a pitcher, that was typical of me. I never did well in practice or warm ups, but in a game I pitched well. I used to drive my dad crazy! Plus that was also the season we went 19-1, which hadn't been done for a long time in that league, and the tournament team for that summer was one of my favorite teams I have ever been a part of.

Sarah Hassman

Being from the Bay Area did you ever come to Stanford softball games when you were younger? Camps?

I have actually been to quite a few Stanford camps. I remember going to my first one when I was 11. It was a weeklong camp that I really enjoyed but I never thought I would be able to go to a school like this. After that, I continued to do a few more camps and clinics between my sophomore and junior year, which was when I realized that I really wanted to go to Stanford.

Describe something that you're NOT good at.

I would have to say that I am not good at singing or dancing, those are two things I just stay away from. For my high school softball team we had an end of the year party where each class had to perform as the music group of their choice. My class decided to do the Spice Girls and I happened to be the only one who didn't know the words to the songs. We had to go up and do our dance/sing; needless to say it was a lot of fun, but not my area of expertise.

What was it like growing up with two brothers?

Growing up with a twin brother was great, he was always there for me and we had a lot of the same friends. You can tell that he is my brother but most people wouldn't guess that we are twins. He is tall, has blond hair, blue eyes, and he can tan. I would have to say that my two brothers and I are very close because my older brother is just a year older than us, so we went through a lot of the same things together. My brothers and I didn't always get along so we got our aggressions out while we were on our trampoline. One day when we were fighting my brother and I took it a little too far and he happened to hit me right in the mouth and knocked out my two front teeth. Let's just say, I had a huge gap in my mouth for a long time.

Is there anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I would have to say that I am addicted to chocolate. No matter how I feel, chocolate will make me that much happier. It doesn't matter if I eat so much at dinner that I feel sick, when it comes to a chocolate dessert, I always have room for it. Maya Burns shares this same obsession with chocolate, but for her it's dark chocolate. I am more of a milk chocolate person.

Do you have any hidden talents?

A hidden talent I have is that I can ride a unicycle. When my brothers and I were younger we all decided that we wanted to learn how to ride a unicycle. After we got three unicycles my brothers and I spent the next few days trying to see who could ride the farthest before falling. Both of my brothers got up and were able to do it after their first few tries. For me on the other hand, I was quite a bit shorter than my brothers and couldn't reach the pedals as well. I remember getting so frustrated because my brothers would purposefully ride in front of me just to get me mad. A few days after getting the unicycle I was finally able to ride it up and down the street.

You said one of your hobbies is playing guitar. How long have you been doing that?

I love playing the guitar, but I wouldn't say I am good at it. It all started with my older brother playing the drums and my twin brother playing the piano. I didn't want to feel left out so I decided I wanted to play the guitar. I used to take lessons when I was little and had the time, but now playing my guitar consists of looking up tabs online to some of my favorite songs and learning how to play them. This summer, I am hoping to spend a lot more time with my guitar and maybe even bring it to school with me next year.

You said you like camping, backpacking, etc. Where is your favorite place to go or favorite place that you have been?

I haven't been backpacking enough to have a favorite place to go yet, but I love to go camping at Yosemite. The one part of Yosemite that I could spend the whole day at is Rainbow pools. You can either sit by the water and relax or jump off these 35 foot rocks into the water down below; it is extremely fun. I really enjoy backpacking because it gives me a chance to really reflect on everything and just relax. Who wouldn't want to be in the great outdoors enjoying the fresh air? What I am really looking forward to is setting up a backpacking trip with Shannon [Koplitz] which will hopefully take place sometime soon. The Lost Coast maybe?

Erikka Moreno

Tell us about your sister. Do you guys get along? What was it like playing against her last year?

My sister Brianna and I are 21 months apart, and we definitely did our fair share of bickering growing up, especially since we played on the same club and high school team for a period of time. We're both very competitive people, so there was always competition. I remember we even had to come up with a system for the front seat of the car because we always fought over that. We worked it out pretty well: I was born on an even day and she was born on an odd day, so I got it on even days and her on odd days. (Of course, it was never truly fair if the month ended in 31 days.) In the end it's always worked out. I remember one high school softball practice where our coach had to sit the team down and have a team talk about how sisters on the same team have a special relationship and "are allowed to say things to others that other teammates can't". That particular year we had both my sister and I along with a set of twins on the team, so there was a good amount of sibling rivalry. Playing against Princeton (where my sister is an outfielder) was definitely one of my highlights from last year. Looking up in the stands I could see my parents, grandparents, and other extended family, wearing a pretty evenly balanced display of both Princeton and Stanford apparel and perched smack dab in the middle of the stands. Late in the game Bri slapped a ball to the left side, and I received the ball at first base in what I will admit was a VERY close play (she was out). We have a picture of Bri reaching first base just as I caught the ball. It's one of my favorite pictures of all time.

Tell us about the job you've had the last two summers.

Over the past two summers, I've had the opportunity to work at an oral surgeon's office back home. My old travel ball coach in as oral surgeon, and offered me a job in his office the summer after my senior year. The first summer I actually worked with teammate Rosey Neill! This has definitely been an amazing experience for me. While I'm still not sure exactly where I'm going with my career, I have always loved medicine, and the opportunity to experience it in such a hands-on environment was invaluable. I would say the most entertaining part of the job involved patients recovering from general anesthesia, as some wake up very "happy". It's always a good day at work when you are proposed to by a 60-year old man coming out of anesthesia.

Is there anything that you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

My name is Erikka, and I am a Fro-Yo addict. Ask anybody who knows me and they will tell you I am hopelessly hooked. From Golden Spoon to Yogurtland, Pinkberry and Palo Alto's own Red Mango, I can't get enough of it! In San Diego a couple weekends ago, we were treated to Golden Spoon in honor of Alissa Haber's 21st birthday. YUMMMM!

Describe something that you're NOT good at.

Last year during a game delay at a home tournament, we played this game called "Signs". In this game, each person has their own sign, and through a combination of clapping and rhythm you first give your sign, then "pass" it to somebody by giving their sign. I just couldn't do it! The team even tried to help by making my sign as simple as a clap but that didn't even help. I am sad to say I am definitely rhythm-challenged...but happy to say it provided a good pregame laugh for Stanny Softball!

Describe your hometown. If you were to take someone on a tour of the area, where would you go?

My hometown is Villa Park, the smallest city in population in Orange County with only 6,000 residents. I have lived in the same house since I was 2 and I love it. Villa Park is known for its absence of sidewalks and streetlights giving it a rural feel. We have only one corner in the entire city with businesses, and that's pretty much the hangout for everyone. Bagel Me and Coffee Grove are my favorite spots there and my "city tour" would stop at both places...after of course, some nearby fro-yo! A visit to SoCal wouldn't be complete without seeing our gorgeous beaches or taking in an Angel game from their home stadium about 5 minutes away!

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about? Is there one particular story or event that has affected who you are today?

One of my shorter Stanford admissions essays asked about something I was interested in pursuing at Stanford, and I wrote about my great-granny's battle with Multiple Sclerosis and the potential of stem-cell research in providing a cure. MS has always been a topic close to my heart, as I watched my granny deal with it my entire life. She knew I was interested in medicine and would always call me, "my granddaughter-the-doctor". She died two years ago, but not before motivating me to make a difference with my life. After coming to Stanford, I'm not sure that pursuing stem-cell research is the way to do that but my great-grandma has motivated me to find something I am passionate in and pursue it whole-heartedly.

You mentioned you've been to Italy and Ireland. What were the occasions for those trips?

Most people don't know how much I love to travel. I love everything about it: flying, meeting new people, trying new food (for the most part), and just experiencing a new way of life. My parents work for American Airlines, so I have been very fortunate in being able to travel a lot throughout my childhood. Unfortunately, I lose these benefits when I graduate from college, so my sister and I have been trying to take advantage of traveling while we can. Our motto is: travel far and travel often! Two recent trips were to Rome and Ireland. Rome was really humbling. There was so much history and culture (and the gelato was amazing!).

I am actually taking a class called Gender and Power in Ancient Rome, and it's awesome to hear the professor discuss places I have actually visited! Over Christmas break, my sister and I went to Ireland and spent New Years Eve in Dublin.

Maya Burns

Being from the Bay Area, were you a Stanford fan growing up?

Okay, so I know this is crazy ironic but I was actually a Cal fan growing up! Looking back it's funny to think about because the only reason I was a Cal fan was for their colors. I played on the West Bay Nuggets and we were also navy and gold, so since I didn't have a preference between which Bay Area team to cheer for, I figured why not Cal? (I now know how terrible of a decision that was!) I'm not the typical softball player who knows anything and everything softball related. Actually, growing up I didn't even want to play softball in college, therefore I didn't attend any college softball games! I wanted to come to Stanford my junior year when I realized that Stanford is the only place that I could receive an amazing combination of athletics and academics while staying conveniently close to home!

Describe something you're NOT good at.

I do not have an inside voice. If you were to come to a practice or a game or just simply spend time with my teammates and I, you wouldn't be able to go 10 minutes without hearing them tell me to quiet down. It's cultivated into a huge joke that even the coaches partake in. I'm never offended when they tell me to be quiet mostly because of my humorous personality. The BEST experience, by far, that I've had (regarding people essentially telling me the shut-up) was with Coach Rittman. It was before a game and I was pointing out how painful one of the opposing player's throw looked. Coach was right behind me and said "Maya, if you're gonna talk smack at least keep your voice down!!!!". The entire team burst out in laughter. I'm not going to forget that one!

Do you have any hidden talents?

My teammates tell me that I am a really good imitator. If it hasn't become clear yet, by general consensus, I am the one everybody laughs at on the team. I usually prefer when they laugh with me, but sometimes it's simply out of my control! So, one time I was sitting with Haber, Maddy and Jenna eating Jimmy V's before a women's basketball game and I saw a passerby frolic in front of us in search of a Pepsi. Only Maddy had the wonderful opportunity to witness the hilarious occurrence, so I felt the need to demonstrate it for Jenna and Haber. I proceeded to stand up and replicate the passerby's actions, and we laughed in hysteria for the following five minutes. It was awesome.

You said one of your hobbies is photography. How did you get started? Do you think you might want to pursue photography in the future or is it just a hobby?

Everybody who knows me, knows that when I am in a social situation, I usually have my camera. I can proudly say that I've inherited this talent from my Dad. You will NEVER find him in social setting or at a sports event without his camera. His camera is so enormous that during club ball other teams would assume he was a professional, working for the tournament or something. He completely took advantage of this and would go into their dugouts so he could get a better angle of my teammates and me up to bat! I'm not as into photography as he is, I just enjoy taking and looking at beautiful photography. I have never really pursued this hobby, but perhaps I will in the future.

What is the most interesting project/field trip you've done for a class?

Going to a Catholic high school, we were required to go on various retreats and field trips that revolve around community service. My sophomore year, we took a trip into the Tenderloin, which is one of the poorest regions of San Francisco, and ironically located just a few blocks from Union Square in downtown. The agency that we worked for was called Saint Anthony's, and there, we were divided up into different groups with specific assignments. The group that I was assigned to had the job of bringing food to the apartments of the poor. I hadn't expected the experience to affect me in the way that it had, but in assisting the poor, I felt a sense of achievement that I could never get from hitting a home run or throwing a runner out. It prompted me to take part in more community service, which I had vaguely considered previously.

Jenna Becerra

Do you have any hidden talents?

I don't know if you would call it a talent, but I have a really good memory. I'm good at recognizing faces of people, even if I haven't seen them in a very long time. For example, when I first arrived on campus this year, my teammates and I went to the freshman athlete dinner to meet people. We met some of the football players, and one of them introduced himself to me and looked really familiar. In the midst of everyone talking, he had sort of just said hello and moved on, but then I asked him what his last name was. He told me, and I said, "Remember me? I'm Jenna Becerra from Pleasant Valley Baptist School. We went to elementary school together." He remembered my name, and it took him a while to recognize me, but he did eventually. I hadn't seen him since fourth grade, and all of our friends still make fun of me and talk about how I remembered him after so long. Because of my good memory, we reunited in college, and we're pretty close friends.

Describe something that you're NOT good at.

I am not good at keeping up with my laundry. Ask Ashley or Maya. One time, I even had to call one of my roommates to remind me how much detergent to put in. I've gotten a lot better at it now, but fall quarter was pretty rough.

Is there anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

First and foremost, I am addicted to chocolate. I tried it once when I was little, and I've been hooked ever since. When I was about five years old, I even told my mom that I couldn't live without chocolate ice cream. Ice cream is the best, and dark chocolate is delicious, too. Now that I'm in college, I am known as the one who ALWAYS gets "froyo" (frozen yogurt) in the dining hall after pretty much every meal. I also love steak and can't eat it without A1 sauce. I love pickles, and my dad and I even drink the juice out of the jar when all of them are gone. Also, I love the show One Tree Hill. I've been watching it every week for all the seasons since about eighth grade. I even stop doing homework to watch it sometimes.

What is the most interesting project/field trip you've done for a class?

In high school, I went to the Museum of Tolerance in L.A. and learned about the Holocaust. I had read the Diary of Anne Frank, and I found the museum really interesting. Although tragic, the history of World War II and the Holocaust is fascinating, and the museum gave me a different perspective about this history.

What was the best vacation you've ever taken?

I've actually never been on a real vacation. Every trip I've ever made outside of the state was usually for softball or some family event. So, I'm gonna say my favorite place to play was Seattle and Colorado. The Washington beach was awesome, and the Colorado mountains are gorgeous. My parents and I went to the original Starbucks and walked along the beach in Seattle a few years ago when we were there for nationals. Also, last year I went white water rafting in Colorado. I was shocked my dad actually let me do something physical that was non-softball related, but it was really fun.

How did you start playing softball? Any funny stories from when you were younger?

My dad took me to watch a game at Camarillo High School when I was around four years old. I saw the pitcher and all of the hitters, and I was in awe. I said, "Daddy, I want to do that." He signed me up for Camarillo's recreation softball league, and I have been playing ever since. My dad played baseball, so we messed around with it in the living room when I was in diapers. You could venture to say that I've been playing since I came out of the womb. As a former baseball player, he learned all he could about softball, and he's been my coach all of my life. We had the usual father-daughter/coach-player tension in which my mom had to play the role of mediator, but much of my success is because of him.

Elaborate a little bit on your hobbies (writing, drawing, photography, music). What are your favorite things to write about, draw, take pictures of etc.?

Music is one of the best things ever created. I grew up around music on my dad's side of the family because he and my aunts and uncles and grandparents had a band when they were all growing up. Maybe it's because of their influence, but I love listening to music. I usually can't just stand still if there's music on. The rhythm gets to me, and I have to move and dance. Like my dad, I like all kinds of music. From rock to rap to country to alternative to oldies, I like it all.

Usually, I just write about things happening in my life as a sort of emotional release. I like just letting my mind flow and writing down all of my ideas. Maybe I'll write a song with my dad one day. My brother already has.

I used to take art classes when I was in elementary school, and I loved drawing and using pastels and such. I entered into drawing and coloring contests at my dad's work, and I actually usually won prizes. Now, I just doodle.

For photography, I just like taking pictures of family and friends. Sometimes, if I see a pretty landscape or gorgeous sunset, I'll take a picture of it. I love looking back at old pictures in old photo albums. It's priceless.

Shannon Koplitz

You said one of your hobbies is camping, backpacking, etc. Where is your favorite place to go or favorite trip that you have done?

The best camping trip I have ever taken is when I went to the Ansel Adams Wilderness this past summer before school started. It was the first time I had ever been backpacking before, so I had absolutely no idea what I was doing, and the friends I went with are all pretty experienced in the wilderness. At first I was kind of nervous about making a fool out of myself, either by toppling over with my pack on, setting the campsite on fire, or doing something else completely stupid. When we actually got out into the woods, though, I forgot all about any anxiety that I had previously. Everything was breathtaking; we camped by crystal clear lakes every night, watched incredible sunrises on the mountains, and I saw more stars than I have ever seen in my life. One of my friends even showed us a new constellation that he had found himself, of a giant teapot pouring out the Milky Way. The trip was also not without its tribulations. Our first night out, we all walked a little ways from our campsite to star-gaze. On our way back, just as we were approaching the camp, we saw some movement down at the far end by our packs; our stuff was being raided by bears! At first we only saw one and managed to shoo it away without incident. Later on in the night, however, we awoke to find that the bear had come back, and this time he had brought a friend. The two bears proceeded to break branches and shuffle around our camp for the rest of the night. We weren't in tents, only in sleeping bags on the ground, so we just lay awake all night staring at the places where the noises were coming from. At one point our fire started again (we must not have put it out thoroughly the first time), so another one of my friends and I sprinted over to it and kicked dirt on it as fast as we could, nervously yelling and clapping and looking around, waiting anxiously for the bears to jump out at us at any minute. A little while later, my guy friend who was sleeping at the end of our sleeping bag train dozed off during a break in the bear noises, only to wake up to find himself face to face with one of the bears, which was about five feet away on the other side of a log. After that we REALLY didn't sleep. In the morning, after we hadn't heard the bears for a while, we went out to check the damage. Fortunately, none of our expensive packs had been damaged, and everything was pretty much accounted for until we checked our food. Not only had the bears kicked one of our bear canisters (plastic bear-proof barrels for storing food) into the middle of the lake, but they had also pulled down our bear bag from a really tall tree and dragged it all the way to the other side of the camp. Our breakfast bagel supply, which was in the bear canister, was now completely soaked in lake water, and two of my friends' toothbrushes were covered in bear slobber. We still had plenty of food for the rest of the trip and never encountered another bear, but every night after that we made sure to securely barricade the food far away from the nearest water source, just to be safe.

What is your major? How did you choose it? Describe what your parents do. Has that inspired you at all to go into a scientific field?

I am a Human Biology major concentrating in Environmental Science and Policy. What really appealed to me about the HumBio major was the idea of studying the biology of human function within the social and psychological context of human culture. I also really liked that after taking a few core classes, you can basically take whatever you want if it relates to your concentration. Scheduling classes at Stanford can be a bit tricky, so having more flexibility when fulfilling requirements for the major is really nice. I'm also minoring in Geological and Environmental Science, which has been really fun. I'm very interested in the Earth Sciences as well, and by blending the GES minor with my area of concentration in HumBio, I have been able to take a wide range of classes catered to my specific interests, involving everything from geochemical and atmospheric processes to international relations and policy development. My parents are both well-established chemistry professors, and even though I don't think I will be taking exactly that path within the sciences, they both know a lot about other areas of science and have been very important sources of advice and information for me throughout my academic career (they have even helped me out with my chemistry homework from time to time).

Describe something that you're NOT good at.

I'm not very good at waking up in the morning (Rosey can attest to this). When I wake up, it probably takes me at least 30 minutes before I'm anywhere near functional. A couple times during fall quarter, I tried to climb down out of the top bunk to go to morning weights and completely missed the last step on the ladder. Also, it is rare within that first 30 minutes to see me answer questions with anything besides nods, grunts, or hand gestures. I'm also really inflexible; I can barely sit cross-legged on the ground, and I have a hard time doing anything remotely resembling gymnastics (my cartwheels are ghastly).

Do you have any hidden talents?

I'm pretty good at guessing the movies that Missy quotes; we both watched a lot of movies growing up, and I can usually guess which movie she is thinking of based on a song or line from the movie. It's actually kind of turned into a game that we play now, and even though no one else on the team usually has any idea what we're talking about, we think it's really fun. I can also ride my bike with no hands, including going around turns.

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about? Is there one particular story or event that has affected who you are today?

I actually don't remember what I wrote my essay about, but if I had to write another one right now it would probably be about Hurricane Katrina and how the changes it brought to my city have impacted my life. I'm from New Orleans, and when Katrina hit my family, I moved to stay with family in Washington State for a couple of months. My family was extremely fortunate and didn't lose anything besides a window and a few roof tiles, but most of my friends and much of the New Orleans community lost everything to the storm. Watching the pure determination of those people as they rebuilt their lives from absolutely nothing changed me as a person. I saw real strength, faith, courage, sacrifice, and generosity. It redefined for me what it means for something to be difficult, and it has helped me to appreciate everyday how incredible my life is.

Anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

My roommate CJ and I are addicted to watching the TV show Ghost Hunters on the SciFi channel. I have actually been watching it for a couple of years now with my mom at home, but I got Carly hooked on it as well and now we watch it almost every Wednesday night. I get scared really easily, so it's good that I have someone else at school who is willing to watch it with me. Whenever I do get scared, it makes me feel better if I can cover my eyes and ears and just peak out, so CJ and I have started watching Ghost Hunters already wrapped up in blankets just in case it gets too scary and we need somewhere to hide.

Mary Kate Smith

Tell us about your career interests.

As far as my career goes, I've known for a while that I want to become a doctor. It wasn't until just recently though that I've become very set on becoming a surgeon, and if all goes as planned, my main goal is neurosurgery. This sounds pretty nerdy, but there is just something about the brain that fascinates me! Its complexity really draws me in and I also hope that sometime during my career I can devote a good amount of time to brain cancer research.

Describe where you're from. What do you miss most about it? What is the biggest difference between California and Florida?

Well most people don't know this but originally I'm from Chicago, Illinois. Both my parents grew up there and the majority of my family still lives there. Apparently though, according to some of my teammates, I say 'Chicago,' 'hockey,' and 'Mom' with a funny accent and this is the only way they know I'm actually telling the truth, considering other than that I'm such a Florida girl. Being from Tampa, the one thing I miss the most is the beach. Each summer I spend a good amount of my time there and usually work up a pretty nice tan, as opposed to being as white as a ghost like I am now! I'd have to say the biggest difference between Cali and Florida would definitely have to be the weather. Needless to say I've gotten pretty used to the cool 70's and 0% humidity, as opposed to the high 90's and 100% humidity on any given day in Florida, even Christmas.

Describe something you're NOT good at.

I am absolutely, 100%, not good at anything relating to or revolving around common sense. Ask any one of my teammates and I can guarantee they will tell you that even though I just dyed my hair brown, I am still a true blonde at heart. The best example of this would probably have to be an instance that took place my senior year of high school during softball season. We were playing a game at home and I, of course, asked one of my teammates whether we were home or visitors. Needless to say I haven't made that mistake since coming to Stanford, there's no way I would ever live that one down!

Is there anything that you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I would definitely have to say that I am addicted to make-up. If I had to guess as to why I got hooked on it, I would probably say because I wasn't allowed to wear it until high school, while all my friends had already been wearing it for a couple of years. I'd have to admit, when it comes to creativity I'm pretty lacking in that department (I can't draw or paint to save my life). But with make-up, I can be one of the creative kids for once in my life!

Do you have any hidden talents?

A hidden talent that has definitely paid off since coming to college would have to be my ability to play pool. We have a pool table in the lounge of my dorm and as often as I can I like to play a round or two. I never played when I was younger, in fact I only started playing since coming to college, but since the start of the year I can say I've beaten a fair amount of the boys in my dorm.

Christina Goswiler

Describe something you're NOT good at.

When I was younger I was really, really messy. The floor of my room was always covered in toys and clothes and my parents would joke that it was impossible for them to tuck me in at night without stepping on something. Specifically one time I remember my mom asked me to clean my room, and instead of doing any real work, I took everything that was on the floor and stuffed it into my closet. I even chose to hide my uneaten tuna sandwich from that school day's lunch behind a piece of furniture in my room. Of course, my mom figured out pretty fast when I was done so early that I had stuffed everything in the closet, but it wasn't until a month later when my room reeked of rotten fish that she discovered the sandwich. Needless to say, I never heard the end of that one.

Is there anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I am addicted to a couple of TV shows, mainly Grey's Anatomy and Ugly Betty. Even without a television at Stanford, I still find ways to watch my favorite shows, mainly online. I started watching these two in particular in my sophomore year of high school, and I have been hooked ever since! The worst part is that the plot of Grey's Anatomy in many cases ends up upsetting me, but I continue to watch it anyway. I swore to myself two years ago, that when the producers ended the season with Christina getting dumped at the altar by Burke I would never watch another episode, and yet here I am two years later without having missed an episode! It is, however, always fun to catch up with Hass the next day at practice about what happened the night before on our favorite show.

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about?

I wrote my Stanford admissions essay about painting. Even though I rarely found the time during high school to paint, when I did it was probably one of the best ways for me to relax and get away from anything that was stressful. In my essay, I wrote about coming home from a softball game that my team had lost and painting to forget about the disappointment of the game.

Tell us about your hometown. If you were to take someone on a tour of the area, where would you go? Being from a SoCal beach town, did you surf when you were younger? Play any beach volleyball?

Manhattan Beach is the ultimate beach town. During the summer, you would be hard pressed to find someone not walking around in flip-flops with a volleyball or surfboard under one arm. If I were taking someone on a tour of the area, it would definitely include the beach, a walk to the end of the pier where there is a small aquarium, and then breakfast at The Kettle, Good Stuff or The Coffee Cart. When I was younger I tried surfing a couple of times (emphasis on tried!). I went to a summer camp called Surf Academy, that taught kids of all ages how to surf and about ocean safety. It was a lot of fun, but never got good enough to surf more than white wash (the wave after it breaks). My favorite memory of the camp was paddling out beyond where the waves break and playing games on our boards in the still water. Of course, trying to get back in was never fun, because we would always get pummeled by waves. My family used to play volleyball almost every weekend at the beach. A typical Saturday morning included going to The Coffee Bean and Tea Leaf on the strand, and then either beach volleyball or a bike ride on the bike path that runs along the beach.

What's the best vacation you've ever taken? What was your favorite thing that you did there?

My best and favorite vacation I have ever taken was to France in my junior year of high school with my French class. It was amazing! We toured most of the country starting in the south in Nice, going as far north as Normandy, and then back down to Paris for the end of the trip. I absolutely loved Paris (who wouldn't) but my favorite part of the trip was probably going to Claude Monet's house in Givernie. His brightly colored pink house with green shutters is surrounded by the most beautiful garden I have ever seen, that includes the famous pond with lily pads and the Chinese Bridge. Because I love art, it was really cool to see these images in real life. I loved everything about France: the culture, the easy-going life style, the people, and I hope to one day live or study there.

Elaborate a little bit on your painting hobby. What is your favorite thing to paint? Is there anything particularly interesting that you've done or that you're especially proud of? Have you had a chance to take any art classes at Stanford yet?

Painting is definitely one of my favorite hobbies. I also draw with pencil, colored pencil, and with or on just about anything else (which sometimes includes doodling in notebooks during class). I don't really have a favorite thing to draw or paint. A lot of the time I paint something that randomly inspires me. It could be an ad I see in a magazine, or a favorite vacation spot; basically whatever makes me happy. I think I am most proud of an abstract painting I did two summers ago because it came completely from my imagination and I kind of made it up as I went. It was really fun to create because I got to fling paint, mix it with sand on the canvas, and run my fingers through it to create the look I wanted. Unfortunately I have not had the chance to take any art classes at Stanford yet. It may be really hard to fit into my schedule, but I would love to get some advice and formal training before I graduate!

Tell us about your major/minor. How did you choose those?

I am a psychology major with (hopefully) a philosophy minor. My father is not much of an advice-giver but before coming to college, he gave me a piece that has stayed with me: do something you enjoy - don't do something just for the money. So my freshman year I started a search for classes I really enjoyed. The first such class was Introduction to Moral Philosophy. The second was Introduction to Psychology. So, these are areas of academia that I have sought out. Unfortunately, I can't really rationalize being a philosophy major because I don't really see myself becoming a philosophy professor or turning into a 60-year-old man with elbow patches and a pipe. What it all boils down to is that I love learning about human behavior - in every facet.

Describe something that you're NOT good at.

I'm actually really uncoordinated. The joke on the team is that I lack coordination until I put on catcher's gear. One time my freshman year, I was walking back into the dugout (which has 3 small steps) after flying out and in my haste to get into the dugout I fell down said steps. I sprained my ankle and had to get it taped for every game the rest of the season. My teammate and roommate Shannon Koplitz jokes that I have a really specific type of coordination - I trip more than anyone else she knows but I never actually fall. I do something massively uncoordinated but then end up saving it with extreme coordination. Any way around it, I don't think I'm that coordinated!!

Do you have any hidden talents?

As far as totally useless talents, I have an interesting wealth of totally useless knowledge. Almost anytime someone asks a random, seemingly useless question, I will inevitably have an answer. Over the summer, my friends and I watched "Cash Cab" all the time and created the ideal "Cash Cab" team. Our ideal team is two of my friends and me. Our expertise extends through pop-culture, current events, and politics. I would be there for all things random and (hopefully) sports related.

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about?

Stanford requires several different admissions essays and I really liked two of my essays: one about the Frost poem "The Silken Tent" and one about a quote from A League of Their Own. I really enjoyed writing the essay about "The Silken Tent" because I really like Robert Frost and this is one my favorite poems of his. If you get a chance, look up this poem, it's a great one!! As for the other essay, I used a quote from the movie that I find extremely inspiring. Jimmy Dugan is asking Dottie Henson why she's deciding to quit playing the game and she replies, "It just got too hard." To which Jimmy retorts, "It's supposed to be hard. If it wasn't hard, everyone would do it. The hard...is what makes it great." First of all, I really like this movie and I think it should be a prerequisite for all softball players. Second of all, I think this is an especially poignant quote and puts into words a lot of the feelings I have about this crazy game we play.

What is your favorite thing about being a catcher? Were you always a catcher or did you migrate from another position? Any funny stories from behind the plate that you can share?

I have been a catcher since I was about 10 years old. Surprising as it may seem, as a little kid I talked a lot. Catching was the only position there was where I could carry on conversations throughout the game. I also lost interest in things really quickly, so being involved in every pitch of the game sort of kept me into it! I like to think I get along pretty well with most umpires and find myself carrying on conversations with most of them. A few weeks ago my mom went to a tournament my old high school was hosting and as soon as she got there, a gaggle of umpires came up to her and inquired about how I was doing up at Stanford!!

Probably my favorite thing about catching is getting to call pitches. Especially with the pitchers I get to work with, it's super fun setting up hitters and watching them try to hit!! Coach Ford and I laugh after some innings, when she knows that I'm just having fun setting up hitters and seeing them strike out. I love getting into batter's heads and messing with them.

Expand on this `watching trashy TV shows' hobby. What are your favorite shows?

Oh my goodness. I absolutely love almost every show on Bravo. I don't know if I classify them as trashy but my mom sure does! All of the Real Housewives shows (Orange County, New York, and Atlanta), Make Me a Supermodel, Project Runway, and Top Chef are absolutely fantastic. I would say the only one I don't really like is Millionaire Matchmaker. My teammates Alissa Haber and Maddy Coon both share a common love of these shows. Not that we have a lot of surplus time, but after practice these shows are a great way to avoid doing productive work! These shows are awesome because they are so insanely ridiculous that they're hilarious.

What did you do last summer?

Last summer I planned this biking adventure for my sister, brother and I. My younger sisters were playing a tournament in South Carolina, so I had this great idea to drive up with my parents and then bike from SC to Washington DC. It would take us a week at most, and we were very excited to start. Unfortunately, things didn't go as planned. I got a flat about 10 miles from where we started, it began raining, my brother took a nasty fall, and we were chased by two big dogs. We finally "found" a place to sleep under an overhang of a random hospice center in some tiny town in SC. The next day was not much better - I got two more flat tires (junkie bike) and I heard talk of quitting (not from me). The last straw came when I looked back to see my sister lying on the side of the road and moaning in pain. Thinking she was hit by a car I rushed back. Thankfully she was only experiencing severe cramping, so we shoved Gatorade and some vitamins down her throat. Our next call was to my mom asking her to pick us up. I was a little bitter that I couldn't continue the trip, but maybe it was a good thing we didn't make it to DC. We had no definite return transportation to Miami and were bound to get more flats from our junkie bikes.

Last summer I also worked with my grandpa's surveying company on Jupiter Island, FL for a month. It was really hot and I got bit by tons of mosquitoes, but I also often got to use a machete to clear foliage in the way.

What are your plans for this summer?

This summer, in some way, I will be fulfilling my goal of getting to DC - but this time I will be getting there by plane. I will be interning with Clark Construction in the nation's capital. I'm not too sure what exactly I'll be doing, but I am excited for the challenge of whatever my job will entail. I might even be working on a green or sustainable structure, which really interests me because of the seemingly limitless possibilities and current innovative thinking associated with sustainable structures.

What is the scariest/craziest thing that you've ever done?

I think one of the scariest/dumbest ideas I ever had was going on a summer bike ride at night in Shark Valley. Shark Valley is a pathway in the Everglades that is open during the day for walkers and bikers and it surrounded by alligator infested marshes. It is closed at night, but it's easy to go under the barricade, and we had a good time the previous winter biking the 15 miles and throwing apples to the gators. This second time was different. What we didn't realize was that the alligators were particularly active this time because of mating and a current drought. At midnight on the two lane, pitch black road through the Everglades, I nearly ran over an alligator that was longer than the lane we were driving in (10-12 ft maybe?). We finally got to the path and biked for about 10 minutes before the loud and close alligator mating calls scared us back into the car and on our way home to our beds.

Describe something you're NOT good at.

I have a very bad short term memory. I can't seem to remember where I put stuff that I had in my hands two minutes ago. I am always trying to remember where I last parked my bike and recently found my bike after six months of thinking that it was "stolen." (I actually parked it near a late night eatery and forgot about it). My phone seems to be the unlucky recipient of most of my forgetfulness. Two weeks after I got my first phone, I forgot I put it on the baby seat of my bike and I later found it crushed in the middle of the road. It's also lived through the washer machine. My favorite was when my phone decided to take a trip to Arizona while I was in New York. My mom got a call from a flight attendant letting her know that I had left my phone on the plane and it had taken a trip without me.

Do you have any hidden talents?

In high school my sisters and I would play a game in which we would guess where books came from based on their smell. We would smell a new book and guess if it came from Borders, Barnes and Noble, or the local bookstore. We could also guess the owner of a used textbook based on the smell and our friends would give us an anonymous textbook so that we could guess whose it was. I was pretty good at it at one time, although I think I have lost a bit of it since coming to Stanford.

What did you write your Stanford admissions essay about?

I wrote my admissions essay about my family and how competitive it was growing up in such a large family. I focused on the first time one of my friends came over for dinner and how we coaxed her to get us water while we chowed down on her spaghetti. Of course I also included how being in a competitive family made me work hard for what I wanted, familiar with failure, blah blah.

Anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I love black and white cookies. They are popular in NYC, so not many places sell them out here so they are a definite treat when I do buy one. Not many people are as obsessed as me, but they have the perfect combination of vanilla and chocolate they can make everyone happy.

Alissa HaberWhat is your major? How did you choose it?

I am currently an English major with an emphasis in creative writing, and I am pretty confident when I say that there aren't many collegiate softball players in the country who can lay claim to this undergraduate degree. I spent my first two years taking many different classes to try and find what I am truly passionate about. I took chemistry, biology, philosophy, even urban studies! Taking a broad range of classes helped me to find what my strengths and weaknesses were as a student, and for me writing was always my strongest suit. Articulating myself through the written word has always come comparatively easy to me, and I enjoy all types of writing, from expository to creative. At the end of my sophomore year I took a class on 19th Century English Literature, and I absolutely loved it. So when I learned that within the English major there was a particular emphasis in writing, I knew that I had found my perfect match. It took me a couple months to accept the fact that I was an English major, seeing as though there is a little bit of a stigma against students who choose to study the liberal arts, but I have learned to embrace it wholeheartedly. I have made it my personal mission to expand my writing abilities to the fullest extent. So while I am learning how to be a good critical and creative writer in my English classes, I have taken it upon myself to look into other avenues a career in writing may take me, which is why I have recently joined The Stanford Daily (the campus newspaper) as a contributing writer in the sports department. I don't know if I want to actually pursue a career in journalism, but to have that skill in my writing arsenal will only make me a better and more skilled writer.

Describe something you're NOT good at.

Ask my mother, and she will tell you that I'm no good at staying organized. If you were to look at my dorm room, you would see that my desk looks like it's about to collapse under the weight of stacks and stacks of papers, books, knick-knacks and the like. She's only partly right though. True, I have been a bit of a pack rat my entire life, and tend to accumulate lots of things in my dorm room, but that doesn't mean that I am unorganized. To the contrary, I have developed my own organizational style within the aggregate clutter that is my room. For the most part, I can always remember where I put everything in my room, and can pull any important paper out of that large stack with relative ease. So although to the untrained eye it may look like a mess, it's really just a massive labyrinth of organization. That being said, sometimes this method fails me from time to time, (for a short time I had forgotten where I had put my Stanford softball playbook, what a disaster!) and I have been trying to refine my unique organizational skills.

Anything you're "addicted to" or spend a lot of time doing?

I can't say that I have any particularly constant addictions, but rather they fluctuate and change over time. Right now, I would say that I am addicted to baking. Recently I have found myself sitting in my room doing nothing, and the thought pops in my head that I should bake something! So I'll just look up a recipe online, go buy the ingredients and bake away! Maybe this is the influence of my mother, who is the best confectioner ever, but I find some sort of calming effect when I bake. I guess it's because life at Stanford can get so stressful, and with classes, homework, softball, and all the other things in between, sometimes it can feel like life is hectic and out of control. But when you just take time to step away from it and focus on something small that you can control (like the ingredients in a recipe) it can bring you back down to Earth.

What was the best vacation you've ever taken or favorite vacation spot?

I have taken some amazing vacations in my life, but even the most exotic of locations could never beat the summers I spent as a kid camping with my family. Ever since I can remember, every summer we would pack up and head to a small reservoir in central California. We would spend anywhere from a couple days to over a week sleeping in our huge tent and spending our days out on the lake on our boat and jet ski. There are so many amazing memories I can think of that have resonated with me. From learning how to water ski, to exploring the campground and looking for lizards under rocks with my brother, or just relaxing on the boat and reading some great books, every memory is special to me. Sadly, we haven't been camping in the few years since I have come to Stanford, but I am hoping that in the coming years we will be able to return to our lake and make some more awesome memories.
