"Stanford afforded me the opportunity to have the best of both the academic and athletic worlds. I cherished the chance to continuously grow and learn, constantly striving to be the best 'me' I could be. Stanford provided the perfect environment for me to challenge myself and reach my goals, while simultaneously allowing me to enjoy the ride."

—Kristin Folkl,
Economics (1995)

"Of all the things that basketball has given me, the thing I value most, by far, is my education at Stanford."

—Kate Starbird,
Computer Science (1997)

"My Stanford education has opened many doors for me and has given me instant credibility for anything I've been interested in."

—Sarah Evans-Moore,
Economics (1986)

The 1990's – Stanford's Decade of Dominance

"I felt very comfortable around the team and coaching staff while I was there, and returned home knowing that Stanford was the place I truly felt at home. I knew I would be challenged both athletically and academically, and that is the only way I want it to be."

"After teaching at Stanford for almost 20 years, I am still in awe of the Cardinal athletes. They are typically among the most confident, focused and well-balanced students with whom I come into contact, and as a result, it is great fun to have them in class. Their accomplishments (both as undergraduates and graduates) are exceptional even among Stanford students, a pretty exceptional bunch. I am thrilled for my daughter to have the chance to be part of this wonderful group."

—Mark Denny father of Katie Denny

Stanford captured its first NCAA Women's Basketball Title in 1989-90, going 32-1 and outscoring its opponents by over 26 points a game.

In the 1990's, Stanford went to the Final Four six times, more than any other school in the nation, and won two national titles.

For a program on a very quick ascent, 1989-90 would be the breakthrough year for Stanford women's basketball.

In her fifth year as head coach, Tara VanDerveer and her staff knew that all the ingredients were in place for a championship team. Great post play, an exceptional back court, good scoring balance, and solid leadership. The question was, "just how good would they be?"

Entering the season with a #3 ranking, the Cardinal answered that question by spinning off 20 consecutive wins to start the year. Then, after suffering their only loss of the season to the University of Washington, Stanford wrapped up the season with 12 straight victories – including five postseason wins and Stanford's first-ever National Championship.

While the Cardinal compiled an impressive 32-1 record and won the Pacific-10 Championship with a 17-1 conference mark, those numbers hardly begin to tell the story. The Cardinal simply dominated everyone. Averaging over 92 points per game, Stanford topped 100 points on 10 different occasions and outscored its opponents by an average of more than 26 points per game. They controlled the boards with an average of over 43 rebounds per contest and had five players scoring between 12 and 18 points a game.

Stanford was fortunate in that one of those players was a shooting guard named Jennifer Azzi. Azzi was the consensus NCAA Player of the Year, winning the Naismith Award, the Wade Trophy and the Honda-Broderick Award. She shot 49.7 percent from the floor, 79.8 percent from the line, an impressive 44.2 from 3-point land and was the heart and soul of the team. But she was joined in the back court by First-Team All-Pac-10 selection Sonja Henning who led the conference with 221 assists. Forward Katy Steding – who would eventually join Azzi on the 1996 gold medal winning USA Basketball team – averaged over 15 points and almost seven rebounds per game. She and C/F Trisha Stevens (17.6 ppg/5.9

rpg) led the team in scoring and joined forward Julie Zeilstra (13.8 ppg/6.1 rpg) to complete one of Stanford's all-time best front courts.

The Cardinal got their first big test in just their fourth game when #2 Tennessee came to Maples Pavilion. Sonja Henning led the way with game-highs in points (23), rebounds (6) and assists (9) as Stanford sent the Volunteers to a 14-point defeat. A couple weeks later, the Cardinal would improve its record to 12-0 with a 40-point win over #7 Washington.

Averaging over 92 points per game, Stanford topped 100 points on 10 different occasions and outscored its opponents by an average of more than 26 points per game.

After its lone loss of the year (81-78 at Washington), only one team would get closer than 26 points to the Cardinal until the Final Four. In fact, Stanford outscored the opposition by an average of more than 15 points throughout the entire NCAA Tournament.

Heading into the NCAA Tournament, Stanford's record stood at 27-1 and they received a bye in the first round. The Cardinal put a quick end to #16 Hawaii's visit to the mainland, disposing of the Rainbows 106-76 in the second round behind a career-high 35 points from Stevens. With the West Regional being held at Maples Pavilion, Stanford beat both #24 Mississippi (78-65) and #22 Arkansas (114-87) on its way to the Final Four.

The Cardinal met #12 Virginia in the semifinals at Knoxville, Tennessee and came away with a nine-point win behind a very balanced scoring attack. Two days later, in front of a then-largest crowd ever to watch a women's basketball tournament game (20,023), Stanford beat #9 Auburn 88-81 to claim the team's first NCAA Championship.

Stanford defeated Auburn 88-81 to win the NCAA crown.

1991-92 NCAA Stanford 78 Championship Team Western Kentucky 62

The 1991-92 NCAA Women's Basketball Championships was held in Los Angeles, California

The 1991-92 Stanford women's basketball team won an NCAA title, its second in three years. That title, most would say, was unexpected. Stanford had lost three very talented First-Team All-Pac-10 performers from the '90-'91 campaign, they only had one senior on the roster, and were simply not deemed ready to challenge for another NCAA championship quite yet.

But that philosophy changed early in the season – when Stanford defeated defending champion Tennessee (96-95 in overtime) in a well-played game in December. Suddenly, anything was within the realm of possibility.

The team, itself, had an interesting feel. On one hand, it was an experienced club, considering eight of the 13 team members had played in one or more Final Fours. On the other hand, it was a very young team, as evidenced by the fact that there was only one senior on the squad. But leadership and work ethic became the identity of this team.

At the forefront was a determined backcourt composed of junior point guard Molly Goodenbour (12.3 ppg/5.4 apg) and sophomore shooting guard Christy Hedgepeth (13.3 ppg/2.2 apg). Goodenbour, named the NCAA Final Four MVP and NCAA West Regional MVP, was fiercely composed and constantly pushed the tempo of her team and the game. The young Hedgepeth provided the Cardinal with a long range threat and dead-eye accuracy from the field.

Despite the flashy guard play, it was Stanford's center, Val Whiting, who stole the show. Whiting led the team with an average of 18.5 points per game and 9.1 rebounds. She was named Pac-10 Player of the Year and was a consensus First-Team All-

America as a junior.

Behind those great players, as well as forwards Rachel Hemmer (11.2 ppg, 6.7 rpg) and Chris MacMurdo (10.9 ppg, 5.5 rpg), the Cardinal put together a 25-3 regular season record and went into the NCAA tournament with confidence.

The Final wasn't even close.

Stanford's 78-62 drubbing of #15 Western Kentucky tied the record for the largest margin of victory in an NCAA women's championship game.

In the end, the Cardinal put it all together with five strong efforts in the NCAA Tournament.

VanDerveer's troops defeated #31 UC Santa Barbara (82-73) to advance to Seattle, Washington for the West Regionals, where they beat #12 Texas Tech (75-63) and #23 USC (82-62). Then, at the Final Four in Los Angeles, the Cardinal drew #1 Virginia in the semifinals and sneaked out with a 66-65 victory. And the final wasn't even close. Stanford's 78-62 drubbing of #15 Western Kentucky tied the record for the largest margin of victory in an NCAA women's championship game.

Finishing 30-3 overall and 15-3 in the Pac-10, Stanford won its fourth straight Pac-10 title. It marked the Cardinal's fifth consecutive appearance in the NCAA Tournament, second NCAA Championship in three years and third straight Final Four appearance.

1990-91 Stanford's Final Four Team

The 1990-91 Final Four Team

1990-91

This team lost two All-Pac-10 performers and their first guard off the bench to graduation. One of those All-Pac-10 players was National Player of the Year, Jennifer Azzi, and the other one was National Team member Katy Steding. Yet, expectations were high and the results were remarkable.

The 1990-91 version of the Cardinal advanced to the Final Four for the second consecutive season and found themselves sandwiched between two NCAA championship teams in Stanford history.

Stanford ended the season 26-6 overall and 16-2 in the Pac-10. They won their third straight conference title and lost a heartbreaker to the eventual national champion Tennessee Volunteers in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament, 68-60.

Had Stanford not been so decimated by injuries, it may have had a chance to beat Tennessee in the semifinal game and try for its second straight title. But leading scorer Julie Zeilstra (calf muscle pull four minutes before game time) and center Trisha Stevens (patella tendon in her right knee) were severely hampered in the final game of the season.

The 1994-95 Final Four Team

The 1994-95 Stanford women's basketball team was young. Very young. In fact, Coach VanDerveer brought in six freshman and the team's leading scorer was a sophomore. But the Cardinal had a deep bench and they were good. Very good.

Led by guard Kate Starbird (16.0 ppg), Stanford compiled a 30-3 record, won the Pac-10 crown (17-1) and advanced to the NCAA Final Four. This time, they lost to the eventual national champion UConn Huskies in the semifinals.

A good deal of credit must be given to the seniors on the team, guard Kate Paye, forward Rachel Hemmer and center Anita Kaplan. Not only did those three players produce on the court, but they led the younger players by example.

The younger players responded. Two of Stanford's top five scorers in the '94-'95 season were freshmen Kristin Folkl (9.5 ppg) and Naomi Mulitauaoepele (7.3 ppg.) Only two players on the roster played less than 250 minutes and three players had over 100 assists.

1995-96 Stanford's Final Four Team

The 1995-96 Final Four Team

1995-96

The 1995-96 Stanford basketball team had quite a new look to it. Head Coach Tara VanDerveer took a one-year hiatus to coach the USA National Team/1996 USA Olympic Basketball Team. Three starters from the year before were lost to graduation. Their third leading scorer, Kristin Folk, took time off to play for the U.S. Olympic Volleyball Team.

Head coach Amy Tucker and co-head coach Marianne Stanley guided the Cardinal in 1995-96 and filled the graduation void with young players. The Cardinal rolled off an 18-0 conference record, winning its seventh Pac-10 championship in the last eight years. They finished 29-3 overall and made their fifth trip to the NCAA Final Four.

Led by junior Kate Starbird's 20.1 ppg, Stanford won 23 consecutive games before dropping an 86-76 semifinal game to #5 Georgia in front of 23,291 fans.

The 1996-97 Final Four Team

1996-97

Everyone was back. The return of 10 players from the previous season, head coach Tara VanDerveer's return, and back-to-back Final Four appearances made the Cardinal an attractive preseason favorite.

Early on, Stanford's season was highlighted by defeating eventual national champion Tennessee in Thompson-Boling Arena, the first time a Cardinal squad had done so. However, in the next game at Old Dominion, Stanford's winning streak was halted in an 83-66 loss. The Cardinal later won a conference record 25 straight games, taking the team into the Final Four. There, the team's season ended in a heartbreaking overtime loss to Old Dominion, 83-82.

The Cardinal finished the season with a second consecutive 18-0 conference mark, and eighth Pac-10 Championship in the last nine years. Overall, the Cardinal posted a 34-2 record, setting a new conference record for most wins in a season. The team's sixth Final Four run was led by senior Kate Starbird, who averaged 20.9 points and set a new school career points record with 2,215.

Kate Paye lettered from 1992-95, and was 13-3 in four NCAA Tournament appearances, including a national title in 1992.

Stanford Players and USA Basketball

Stanford has sent several players overseas to play in international competitions with USA Basketball. In the past several years, Stanford team members have traveled to China, Taiwan, Brazil, Spain, Hungary, the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Japan, Germany, Malaysia, England, Cuba, Canada, Belgium, France, Korea, Italy, Argentina, the Czech Republic, New Zealand and the Dominican Republic.

In 1995-96, Stanford alums Jennifer Azzi and Katy Steding along with Tara VanDerveer racked up over 100,000 miles in travel as part of the USA National/Olympic Team. The squad posted an undefeated record through the international tour and the Olympics, earning a gold medal in Atlanta. Azzi and Steding are familiar with international play, as both participated on tours while at Stanford and played professionally in Europe after graduation.

Besides Azzi and Steding, Sonja Henning (1990, 1991) and Anita Kaplan (1994) have also played for U.S. National Teams. Additionally, several players have competed as part of the U.S. National World Qualifying Games, U.S. Pan American and U.S. Junior National Select teams.

Most recently, Jayne Appel and Candice Wiggins contributed to the success of a pair of U.S. junior squads in international competition. Wiggins, who was named the United States Olympic Committee's Player of the Month for July 2007, performed double duty over that summer, helping lead the U.S. to the gold at the Under-21 World Championships in Russia, then joining up with Appel to again lead the Americans to the gold at the Pan-American Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. At the Under-21 World Championships, Wiggins averaged 13.1 points a game for the U.S., including a 30-point effort in an opening game come-from-behind win and a 27-point game in a semifinal victory against Russia.

Appel helped the USA Basketball U18 National Team to a gold medal at the FIBA Americas U18 Championship with four straight wins at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., in July 2006. The USA began with a 121-56 victory over Paraguay, defeated Brazil 75-48, routed Argentina 81-47 before capping the tournament with an 87-52 leveling of Canada in the gold medal game. Appel averaged seven points, nine rebounds and 1.8 blocks in just under 16 minutes per game during the tournament.

In 2005, Wiggins spent her second summer with the USA Basketball Junior National Team, as she helped the squad capture first place in Tunis, Tunisia. Wiggins was picked to captain the team and was named to the five-member All-U19 World Championship Team, after finishing the tournament averaging 15.8 points per game, while shooting 57.1 percent (44-77 FGs) from the field and 42.9 (18-42 3pt FGs) from three-point range. 2007 graduate Brooke Smith also competed for the U.S. at the World University Games, where she helped the Americans bring home their second gold medal for women's basketball.

Prior to her arrival on The Farm in August 2004, Wiggins captained the USA Basketball Junior National Team and helped the squad take gold at the FIBA America's Junior World Championship Qualifying Tournament in Puerto Rico.

In 2002, guard Kelley Suminski was invited to the qualifying trials for the USA Basketball World Championship for Young Women Team. And in 2001, Cori Jennifer Azzi proudly wears the Olympic Gold Medal as a member of the 1996 U.S. Olympic Team in Atlanta. She now plays for the San Antonio Silver Stars of the WNBA, and led the league in 3-point percentage in 2001 (51.4).

Katy Steding joined fellow Cardinal Jennifer Azzi to lead USA Basketball to a perfect 60-0 record and gold medal during 1995-96. She played professionally for the Portland Power of the ABL and now the Seattle Storm and Sacramento Monarchs of the WNBA.

Enghusen and Lindsey Yamasaki helped the U.S. win gold at the World University Games in China. Stanford was one of only two schools to have two or more players on the 12-person roster.

"We encourage our players to compete during the summer," said VanDerveer. "I'm very proud of our players' achievements. We are honored when any one of our players is chosen to compete on an all-star team – especially if it is for a team that can travel internationally. It provides a great learning experience in so many ways."

Several other Stanford players have seen playing and coaching time overseas after graduation, including: Bethany Donaphin (Turkey), Cori Enghusen (South Korea), Carolyn Moos (France), Kate Starbird (France, Austria, Spain), Val Whiting (Brazil, Italy), Trisha Stevens (Japan), Julie Zeilstra (Japan), Sue Sebolt (Norway), Evon Asforis (Spain), Sonja Henning (Sweden), Sebnem Kimyacioglu (Turkey), Heather Owen (Japan), Vanessa Nygaard (France), Rachel Hemmer (France), Kristin Folk (Australia), Katy Steding (Spain, Japan) and Leslie Crandell (coach – Japan). More recently, 2007 graduates Brooke Smith and Kristen Newlin have signed on to continue their careers overseas, with Smith heading to Italy, and Newlin to Turkey.

Cardinal players have not had to wait to see international play until after graduation. Numerous individuals have participated on all-star teams. In 1996, Naomi Mulitauaoepele joined other Pac-10 players for a tour of Japan. In addition to Mulitauaoepele, five Stanford players have traveled with the Pac-10 to foreign lands: Kate Paye (1992, Belgium), Whiting (1991, Taiwan), Chris MacMurdo (1990, Germany), Steding (1989, Hungary) and Azzi (1988, Taiwan).

Susan King Borchardt made her WNBA debut with the Minnesota Lynx in 2005.

Nicole Powell was named Most Improved Player during the Monarchs' 2005 WNBA title run.

Olympia Scott captured the WNBA title while playing for the Sacramento Monarchs in 2005.

Kate Starbird played in the WNBA from 1999-2002, and returned in 2004 to play for the Indiana Fever.

Stanford Goes Cardinal Gains International Experience Overseas

The women's basketball team visited Italy in September of 2003.

The group poses in front of Tivoli Fountain in Rome.

Year after year, the Stanford women's basketball program has made a big impression overseas. The summer of 2003 was a prime example when the Cardinal embarked on its fifth foreign tour in the last 20 years.

The Cardinal traveled to Italy from September 11-22, and played exhibition games against professional teams in Rome, Florence, Venice and Como. Besides playing Italy's best on the hardwood, the team also experienced many of the country's tourist attractions, such as the Vatican and the Colosseum.

"The trip to Italy was a memorable one," Stanford head coach Tara VanDerveer said. "It provided experiences that our team will never forget."

In addition to traveling to Italy in both 1996 and 2003, Stanford teams have also participated in summer tours to New Zealand (1984), China (1988) and France (1992).

The team visited the Colosseum in Rome.

The group poses with some gladiators outside the Colosseum.

CURRENT PLAYERS IN BOLD CAPS.

Candice Wiggins

Candice Wiggins, a senior guard, is a three-time WBCA/Kodak All-American. The San Diego native led Stanford in scoring and steals for the third year in a row in 2006-07, helping the Cardinal to its seventh straight Pac-10 title. She also was instrumental in Stanford's run to the Elite Eight in 2005-06, earning her second straight Pac-10 Player of the Year award. Wiggins scored 21.8 points per game in her second season as the Cardinal went 26-8. In addition to her All-America honors, in her rookie season, Wiggins was also named the U.S. Basketball Writers Association Co-Freshman of the Year, the Pac-10 Freshman and Player of the Year, and earned Second-Team All-America accolades from the Associated Press. As a sophomore, was again named a Second-Team All-American by the AP. She has helped the Cardinal to a 87-16 record in her three seasons and is averaging 18.8 points per game in her career, a new school record.

Jennifer Azzi

While at Stanford, Jennifer Azzi was the 1990 Naismith National Player of the Year, as well as winner of the Wade Trophy and Honda-Broderick Award. Azzi was a Kodak First Team All-American and Pac-10 Player of the Year in 1988 and 1989. Azzi averaged 14.7 points, 3.8 rebounds and 6.1 assists per game for the Cardinal during her career, as the Cardinal accumulated a 101-23 record, two Pac-10 championships and its first NCAA Championship.

After her Stanford career, Azzi's basketball success continued, as she was a member the gold-medal winning 1996 U.S. Olympic team. While on the U.S. National Team, Azzi was a world champion in 1990 and 1998, a World Championship bronze medalist in 1994, and a Goodwill Games gold medalist.

Azzi played professionally overseas, in the ABL and in the WNBA until retiring in 2003.

Nicole Powell

Nicole Powell was a Kodak First-Team All-American and a finalist for the James Naismith Player of the Year for three-consecutive years (2002-04). She began her career with the Cardinal as Pac-10 Freshman of the Year in 2000 and was named Conference Player of the Year in 2002 and 2004. Powell helped Stanford accumulate a 105-26 record over her four years, as she averaged 17.3 points, 9.6 rebounds and 4.8 assists for the Cardinal. She is Stanford's all-time leader in career rebounds (1,143) and third all-time leading scorer (2,062 points). Powell is the only player in Pac-10 history to have recorded more than one career triple-double, tallying six in her career.

After graduating from Stanford in 2004, Powell became the Cardinal's highest draft pick, as the Charlotte Sting selected her with the third pick in the WNBA Draft. In her second season, she aided the Sacramento Monarchs title run in 2005 and was chosen as the WNBA's Most Improved Player.

Sonja Henning

While at Stanford, Sonja Henning began her career by winning the Women's Basketball News Service Collegiate Freshman Player of the year in 1988. She went on to be a Kodak First-Team All-American and an NCAA Women's All-Final Four selection in her senior season. She was named All-Pac-10 for three-consecutive years (1989-91), and helped Stanford accumulate a 113-15 record, helping the Cardinal to its first NCAA Championship in 1990. Henning was a member of the U.S. Goodwill Games and the U.S. World Games in 1990, and a U.S. Pan-Am team player in 1991. While on the National Team, Henning helped the U.S. to a world championship in 1990.

Val Whiting

Val Whiting was a two-time Kodak First-Team All-American, and a two-time James Naismith Player of the Year Finalist in 1992 and 1993. She began her career for the Cardinal by being named Pac-10 Freshman of the Year and National Freshman of the Year by Women's Basketball News Service in 1990. She was an NCAA All-Final Four selection in 1992, and All-Pac-10 in 1992 and 1993. During her career, Stanford accumulated a 114-16 record and won four-consecutive Pac-10 Championships and two NCAA Championships in 1990 and 1992. At the time that she finished her career, she was Stanford's all-time leading scorer with 2,077 points and the top-rebounder with 1,134 rebounds.

Kate Starbird

Kate Starbird won the James Naismith National Player of the Year in 1997 and was a Kodak First-Team All-American in 1996 and 1997. Starbird was tabbed All-Pac-10 in both 1995 and 1996, and helped the Cardinal to three-consecutive Pac-10 Championships (1995-97). She helped Stanford to a 118-14 record with three Final Four appearances. She averaged 16.9 points per game, 3.9 rebounds, and 3.3 assists, as Starbird finished her career at Stanford as the all-time high scorer with 2,215 points, a record that still stands.

Kristin Folkl

In her senior season, Kristin Folkl was named a Kodak First-Team All-American, a Naismith Player of the Year Finalist, and a GTE/COSIDA Academic All-American Second-Team. Folkl was chosen as an All-Pac-10 Freshman in 1995 and was all-conference in 1998. She wrapped up her collegiate basketball career leading the team in scoring and rebounds with 18.9 points and 9.2 rebounds per game her senior year. Folkl helped the Cardinal to two Final Four appearances and three Pac-10 Championships. Folkl also competed on the Stanford volleyball team helping the Cardinal to three NCAA Championships in 1994, 1996 and 1997.
